DEATH OF SECRETARY RAWLINS.

Interesting Particulars of His Last Moments.

Failure of the President to See Him Alive.

Sketch of His Life and Services.

The Last Hours of the Secretary of War—Affecting Scenes—His Wish to See the President—His Last Words—President Grant's Despatch to Mrs. Rawlins Announcing Her Husband's Death.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6, 1869.

The announcement of the death of Secretary Rawlins late this afternoon cast a gloom over the city. It was generally known that he was very ill, but he has rallied on so many occasions when recovery seemed almost impossible that his friends hoped he might do so again. On Friday night, after his second hemorrhage, it seemed as if he could not survive. For over five hours he lay in an unconscious stupor, while his physician, Dr. D. W. Bliss, and General Giles A. Smith watched anxiously by his bedside. Dr. Bliss, who has attended General Rawlins ever since he came to Washington, and who had made a special study of his case, was the first to notice the change for the better. He had administered some stimulant to General Rawlins, and, as the latter began to revive under it, Dr. Bliss seized General Smith by the arm and exclaimed with great warmth, "General, he is going to live!" The Secretary continued to rally, and the physicians entertained hopes of restoring him to his usual health. He talked himself of being out to-day, and mentioned some matters of business that he would attend to at the War Department.

The recovery, however, proved to be of a momentary character. On Saturday afternoon he had a relapse. The strain on his lungs, caused by the repeated hemorrhages and the severe coughing, was too great and soon began to show its effect. Everything that could be done for him in the shape of medical aid was done. Dr. Bliss remained constantly with him, and, in addition, Surgeon General Barnes and Dr. Norris, his assistant, were called in consultation. Yesterday morning it became evident that General Rawlins could not recover. He expressed this opinion himself, and it was confirmed by his physicians. He set about to prepare for death with as much calmness and deliberation as if he were going on a short and pleasant journey. He dictated his will to General Parker with the most lawyer-like precision, and then gave some directions about his personal and public papers. Up to a very late hour last night the residence of General Giles A. Smith, where Secretary Rawlins lay, was thronged with anxious, inquiring friends. Seven of his old comrades who served with him in the Army of Tennessee stood around his bedside at once. To one of them, General W. F. Clarke, of Texas, he said:—"Well, General, this puts me in mind of old times to see so many of you." Dr. B. H. Peterson, of New Orleans, who has been stopping at the house of General Smith, and was an old friend of the Secretary, was among the most devoted of those who tended by the bedside, and rendered great service to the regular physicians.

About nine o'clock this morning, while General Sherman, Colonel Parker, Dr. B. H. Peterson and Generals John E. Smith and Giles A. Smith were by his side, General Rawlins suddenly roused himself and inquired what time it was. General Sherman took out his watch and told the hour.

"Has the President yet come?" said Rawlins, with an eager glance at those about him.

"No," said Sherman, "but I expect he will be here in about ten minutes. I will go now myself to the train to meet him."

"I hope I may see him before all is over," murmured Rawlins.

"You shall, my dear friend, you shall," was the reply from all present.

Poor Rawlins' thoughts in those last hours seemed devoted to Grant, his wife and his God. His desire to have one last talk with his old chief was very deep, and no doubt kept him alive many hours. But it was not to be so. Sherman's assurance that the President would be by the bedside in ten minutes was only an affectionate evasion to hold the delicate thread of life unbroken a little longer, perhaps until Grant really would return to brighten the last moments.

As the day wore on and death approached he became more anxious to see the President, and inquired every now and then if he had arrived. He said to Dr. Bliss, who asked him if he had any message for the President, "I would like to have seen him, but it's no matter."

When it became evident to him that he was about to die Secretary Rawlins manifested great concern about the welfare of his family. He had not been able to save much money, and he had little to leave them. Those around him noticed this, and Senator Morton, who happened to be at the bedside at the time, said, "Give yourself no uneasiness about your family, General, the country will see that they are taken care of." General Giles A. Smith said to him, "General, will you allow the Society of the Army of the Tennessee to adopt your children and take care of your wife?"

The dying man replied, with tears in his eyes, "Yes, General, and I know my brave comrades will do it."

Early this afternoon the following despatch was received from Attorney General Hoar and read to Secretary Rawlins:—

CONCORD, Mass., Sept. 6, 1869.

If General Rawlins is living convey to him the assurance of my respect and affection, and of the sorrow with which I learn the condition of a friend so highly valued and a man so upright, able and faithful. God bless and keep him. E. R. HOAR.

Soon afterwards the following despatch was received by General Sherman from General Sheridan:—

CHICAGO, Sept. 6, 1869.

Will you please give my love to Rawlins. All the officers here send their love to him.
P. SHERIDAN.

This characteristic despatch was read to Secretary Rawlins by General Smith shortly before three o'clock. The Secretary, on hearing, brightened up and said in a low voice, "Oh, if I could only get well from the love of my friends, how should I ever repay them!" General Sherman, before sending this despatch to be read to Rawlins, wrote on the margin to General Smith:—

Please read this to Rawlins if his attending physician approves. Send me word how he is. I expect to meet Grant at ten minutes past five.
SHERMAN.

About four o'clock Secretary Rawlins raised himself upon his right elbow and leaned his head upon his hand as if to ease himself. He remained in this position but a few seconds, when he lay down again and turning over on his left side gave a long sigh. Motion-ing to Dr. Bliss, who stood near him, he said, "Lift me up a little." These were his last words. Dr. Bliss and Dr. Peterson gently raised him and adjusted the pillows at his back. Almost immediately a change came over his countenance. It was the change preceding dissolution. His eyes assumed a vacant look, his head fell back a little, his face turned to a deadly pallor and the last faint struggle occurred. It was so faint as to be scarcely visible to other than medical eyes. When the breath left his body he was reclining upon the left arm of Dr. Bliss, who held the right wrist of the dying man and noted with his watch the declining pulsations.

At the time of his death the following gentlemen were around his bedside:—Secretary Robeson, Postmaster General Creswell, General Giles A. Smith, General Parker, General John E. Smith, James Rawlins, brother of the Secretary; Surgeon General Barnes, Rev. Dr. Wilson, Dr. Bliss and Dr. Peterson.

After he had expired Dr. Bliss, turning to one of the members of the Cabinet, said, "The soul of Grant's Cabinet is gone," to which the member addressed nodded assent.

President Grant arrived about a quarter-past five o'clock. The first person he met was Dr. Bliss as he entered the house. He inquired very particularly when Secretary Rawlins died and what he had said. Dr. Bliss told the President the hour at which the Secretary had died and then said, "Mr. President, towards the last he inquired constantly for you, as indeed he did all the time." The President said he would like to have seen General Rawlins, and then explained to Dr. Bliss the obstacles which lay in the way of his reaching here sooner. He next inquired whether any message had been sent to the wife of General Rawlins, and was informed that a despatch had been sent merely announcing his death. The President then sat down and wrote the following telegram to Mrs. Rawlins:—

MRS. MARY E. RAWLINS, Danbury, Conn.:—

Your beloved husband expired at twelve minutes after four o'clock this afternoon, to be mourned by a family, friends who loved him for his personal worth and services to his country, and a nation who acknowledge their debt of gratitude to him. On consultation with friends, it is determined that he shall be buried in the Congressional Burying-ground as the most appropriate place, unless you have other suggestions to make. The time of the funeral is not arranged, but probably will take place on Thursday next. U. S. GRANT.

Soon after Secretary Rawlins died his body was embalmed under the supervision of Dr. Bliss, in the same room where his last moments were spent. On the conclusion of this process he was arrayed in his old army uniform and taken down stairs to the drawing-room, where his body was laid out.

Journey of President Grant from Saratoga to Washington for the Purpose of Seeing General Rawlins—He Arrives After the General's Death.

The President, accompanied by General Porter, arrived here this evening at ten minutes before five o'clock. At the depot he was met by General W. T. Sherman, Secretary Cox and General Dent. From these distinguished gentlemen the President received the first tidings of the death of his faithful Secretary, adjutant and friend. On Saturday morning last the President received a despatch from this city, dated the night before, announcing the serious physical condition of General Rawlins. Arrangements were at once made for the departure of the President the same day, as he expressed a strong desire to reach Washington and see General Rawlins before his decease, the President having, from the tenor of the despatch, given up all hopes of his recovery from his last attack. Soon after the receipt of this despatch another was brought in, saying that General Rawlins had revived and the symptoms were decidedly encouraging. The despatch bore such a cheerful aspect that the President thought that he would have time to visit Senator Conkling, as he had promised sometime before, and then, in the event of Secretary Rawlins indicating no positive change for the better, would return to Washington. It was the second despatch of Saturday that changed his determination of repairing to Washington immediately. Nothing more except of a favorable character was heard on Saturday. On Sunday, through the courtesy of Mr. E. S. Sanford, of the telegraph company, the Saratoga office was kept open all day, and communication was kept up without interruption with Washington, in order that should any despatches arrive they would be immediately delivered. At twelve o'clock Sunday, while Mr. Sanford and your correspondent were waiting in the telegraph office, a despatch was received announcing that the condition of General Rawlins was not as favorable as was anticipated. This despatch was handed the President by Mr. Sanford, as he and General Porter were returning from church. The President read the despatch and at once proceeded to his rooms and addressed the letter to Senator Conkling, who had arrived in the city the night before, in which he expresses all that warmth of feeling which has existed between himself and General Rawlins for so many years. The President now seemed to realize the true condition of General Rawlins. In the letter to Senator Conkling he expressed his forebodings, saying that "The most recent despatches scarcely leave a hope that I may see him alive." Owing to the day being the Sabbath it was found impossible to get a special train to carry him directly through. The only resource, therefore, was to take the regular train which would bring him to New York early in the morning to take the Washington train, or a special if ready, as requested by telegraph. At fifteen minutes before four o'clock in the afternoon another despatch was received, stating that General Rawlins was rapidly sinking and had expressed urgent desire to see the President. The mental anguish now suffered by the President was intensely increased by the necessary delay in his having been detained from his dying comrade and friend. At half-past five o'clock, bidding farewell to his wife and family, who were to follow as far as New York this morning and there remain, in company with General Porter, he left the Union Hotel for the depot. Here a private apartment had been set apart for him in one of the regular drawing room cars. On the train he was joined by Senator Conkling and Ward Hunt, Chief Justice of the Court of Appeals of New York. On the way he seemed oppressed by the most melancholy feelings. He talked of little else than the close relations that had long been held between himself and General Rawlins and expressed a sincere wish that the General might be spared until his arrival. To Senator Conkling he said, "I could not feel the loss of a near and dear relative more keenly than the loss of General Rawlins." Arriving at Albany soon after seven o'clock, Senator Conkling and Chief Justice Hunt left the President to take the train to their home. It was here found that no special train was to be had, and the regular train would lay over until two o'clock in the morning. This would occasion a delay of seven hours. In order to avoid the curious gaze of the crowd, as well as the annoyance of the less considerate, the President determined to take the steamer, which would bring him to New York as early as by the cars. From the train he took a carriage, driving rapidly to the steamer Vanderbilt, Captain Hancock, which was lying at the wharf. By eight o'clock the steamer was under way. The President took a very light supper, and, after spending about half an hour on the after deck, uttering scarcely a word but evidently chafing under the delay and his anxiety to finish his painful journey, he retired. Upon rising this morning, at half-past six o'clock, he said that he had passed a sleepless night. As soon as the steamer reached her dock he landed, and taking a carriage rode to the Astor House, where he breakfasted, and proceeded directly to the Washington depot at Jersey City. At Jersey City another delay was encountered. The President here certainly anticipated that a special train would be in readiness, but it was discovered that the time had been too short to make the necessary arrangements. He therefore took the regular train. At Wilmington he received a despatch saying that General Rawlins was sinking more rapidly than before and that he was losing all knowledge of surrounding objects. At Baltimore a special car and locomotive was at last obtained. A carriage conveyed the President rapidly across the city to the Washington depot. Arriving at the depot, he, with General Porter, got aboard the train which left immediately in advance of the express. Nothing more was now heard until reaching this city. A despatch had been sent as far as the Relay House, but the train had already passed that station At five minutes past four o'clock, General Dent was standing by the bedside of the dying Secretary, holding him by the hand, observing the paroxysms which were about taking place. He left the chamber of death and hastening to the depot endeavored by telegraph to expedite the movements of the train. A few minutes later Secretary Cox arrived at the depot and informed General Dent that all was over. General Sherman arrived a few minutes later in his carriage to await the arrival of the President. Upon reaching the depot in this city and learning the sad intelligence President Grant was deeply moved. He hastened with a sorrowful countenance to the carriage, followed by General Sherman and Secretary Cox. The President almost buried himself in the carriage, which drove off rapidly to the house where he could view the remains of one of whom he so much desired to catch one last word or look of recognition before his soul left its mortal tenement.

Cabinet Meeting to Arrange Matters for the Funeral—Measures Adopted—The President Again by the Corpse of His Friend.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6, 1869.

After leaving the residence of General Smith the President repaired at once to the Executive Mansion and called a special Cabinet meeting, which met about eight o'clock this evening. Secretaries Cox and Robeson and Postmaster General Creswell were present; also General Sherman, who was in attendance upon invitation. The disposition of the body and details of the funeral were discussed. It was determined that the deceased should be buried in the Congressional Cemetery with military honors. The President considered this choice of a last resting place as eminently proper, as deceased was a distinguished and energetic public servant. It was also arranged that the remains of General Rawlins should be conveyed to the War Department at nine o'clock to-morrow morning, and there remain in state till Thursday at ten A. M. Then the funeral should take place, nothing transpiring meanwhile to change the arrangement. A detachment of fifty men of the Fifth cavalry will be constantly in attendance at the War Department as a guard of honor. Colonel W. F. Barry, of the Second artillery, will command the troops. The marines at the Washington Navy Yard will report to Colonel Barry for duty at the funeral to-morrow. Mourning orders will be issued from the State Department, closing all the public offices and directing that they be appropriately draped in mourning. The President will attend the funeral, after which he will join his family in New York, the Executive Mansion still being in great disorder, on account of the presence of the workmen engaged in repairs.

This evening a despatch was sent to the Governor of Illinois asking if he had suggestions to make regarding the funeral services.

From the Cabinet meeting, in company with Secretary Robeson, the President rode to the residence of General Smith and remained some time near the corpse of General Rawlins. At a late hour this evening no reply had been received from Mrs. Rawlins in answer to the despatch of the President.

Condolence of the Swiss Legation.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6, 1869.

The following note of condolence from the Swiss Legation here was sent to Dr. Bliss with the request that if the Secretary of War was still alive he would present it to him. The note did not reach Dr. Bliss, however, until after the Secretary's death.

SWISS LEGATION, WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 6, 1869.

The Swiss Consul General and Members of the Legation have learned with great regret of the serious illness of the honorable Secretary of War, General John A. Rawlins. The gentlemen of the Legation earnestly express the hope that the life of the distinguished sufferer may be spared to his many friends, but more especially to his country. May our kind and merciful Providence grant the prayer of all who would sincerely deplore his loss, but who now humbly petition the Throne of Grace for his recovery.

The Successor of General Rawlins.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6, 1869.

It is understood that General Sherman will act as Secretary of War ad interim. The name of Major General Grenville M. Dodge, late of the Army of the Tennessee and at present Chief Engineer of the Union Pacific Railroad, is prominently mentioned in connection with the successors to the office.

LIFE AND SERVICES OF THE DECEASED SECRETARY.

General John A. Rawlins was born in Jo Davies' county, Illinois, on the 13th of February, 1831. By the paternal side he is descended from a family of Virginians that moved to Kentucky and subsequently removed to Missouri, where his father married. The subject of this sketch received a common school and academic education, and until nearly twenty-three years of age lived on a farm and was engaged in agricultural pursuits. In November, 1853, he entered the law office of J. P. Stevens, of Galena, where he made the acquaintance of President Grant. In October, 1854, he was admitted to the bar and, opening an office, commenced the practice of his profession, in which, although he did not make a fortune, he may be said to have been tolerably successful. In June, 1856, he married Miss Emily Smith, of Goshen, N. Y., with whom he lived most happily for a couple of months over five years, when she died, having borne him three children. She is said to have been a most estimable lady. In December, 1863, he married the second time—to Miss Mary E. Hurlburt, of Danbury, Conn. This lady, who survives him, is at present an invalid in Connecticut, or was a few days ago. By her he had several children, the last of whom is an infant of a few weeks.

HIS POLITICAL CAREER.

Although General Rawlins held no public offices prior to the war he was known in Galena as an active, influential and able democratic politician. He was nominated in 1860 for the office of democratic Elector on the Douglas ticket for the First Congressional district of Illinois, and made a strong canvass against Judge Allen C. Fuller, of Belvidere, the Circuit Judge, and afterwards Adjutant General of Illinois. Soon after the Confederate forces fired upon Fort Sumter a large public meeting was held at Galena by the republicans and war democrats, at which President (then Mr. Grant) presided, and General Rawlins spoke. The action of Grant caused no surprise, as he was then unknown, and his views one way or the other made but little difference. The case was different with Rawlins, however. He was widely known as a democrat, and in his speeches had bitterly denounced the republicans. His declaration in favor of coercive measures was all the more surprising from the fact that at the time the great leader of his wing of the democratic party, Senator Douglas, had not yet made known his intended action. As might be supposed, the stand he took in support of the preservation of the Union at any cost greatly influenced many of his fellow citizens, who relied upon his judgment, and who were in doubt as to the wisest step for the government to pursue at that momentous period. He urged the people to volunteer and aid in the work of bringing back the seceded States, announcing at the same time his purpose to enter the army at an early date.

HIS MILITARY RECORD.

In August, 1861, at the special request of then Brigadier General U. S. Grant, he received the appointment of Assistant Adjutant General, with the rank of captain, and was assigned to that officer. At this time Mr. Rawlins was spoken of as the Major of the famous Forty-fifth Illinois Volunteers, otherwise known as the Lead Mine regiment; and the first intimation he had of his new appointment was through the newspapers, and immediately after through an order of General Grant assigning him to duty. The order was dated September 8, 1861; but, suffering a recent family bereavement in the loss of his wife, Captain Rawlins did not join General Grant, then at Cairo, until five days after. From that time up to the present he has been continually at the side of General Grant and accompanied him in all his campaigns, the landmarks of which are the battles of Belmont, Fort Henry, Fort Donelson, Shiloh, Corinth, Iuka, the Tallahachie expedition to Oxford, Mississippi, Port Gibson, Raymond, Jackson, Champion Hill, Big Black, the crowning victory of Vicksburg, Chattanooga, the Wilderness, North Anna, Pamunkey, Tolopatomoy, Cold Harbor and the front of Petersburg and Richmond. At Culpepper Court House, Va., General Grant presented General Rawlins with a sash, with the following note:—

This sash—worn by me in all my battles and campaigns from and including the battle of Belmont to and including the capture of Vicksburg, July 4, 1863—is presented by me to Brigadier General John A. Rawlins, my chief of staff, in evidence of my appreciation of him as an officer and friend.
U. S. GRANT, Lieutenant General.

In the line of promotion Captain Rawlins was made major February 16, 1862, lieutenant colonel November 1, 1862, and brigadier general of volunteers August 11, 1863. He was first appointed chief of staff to General Grant in November, 1862, and held that position, either by full rank or acting until appointed Secretary of War. The special enactment of Congress creating the office of chief of staff to Lieutenant General Grant conferred upon General Rawlins, who had been appointed to the position, the status of a brigadier general of the regular army. On March 3, 1865, General Rawlins was confirmed by the United States Senate as brevet major general of volunteers, to date from February 24, 1863. Of his gallantry and ability as a soldier the country is well aware. It is not improbable that had he entered the service in any other capacity than that of a staff officer he would have risen to high command and would have ranked with Generals Sherman and Sheridan. As it was his rare genius for military control was recognized by General Grant, who elevated him to the highest position that an officer of the staff could attain. He bore the reputation of being the most thorough and practical adjutant general in the army. Although not a graduate of West Point the military education he gave himself enabled him to understand all the workings and necessities of large armies. The efficiency attained by all of the forces commanded by General Grant was proof of his knowledge of their requirements. To this excellence, the result of much study and thought, must be added an intuitive perception of the elements which command success in war and which he turned to practical account.

HIS ADMINISTRATION OF THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

For a short time after General Grant's inauguration Major General Schofield remained at the head of the War Department. The President had long decided upon appointing General Rawlins his Secretary of War, but was uncertain of his acceptance of the office. The deceased officer was a man of limited circumstances, and he is said to have objected to the preferment on the grounds of the small salary and heavy expenditure it entailed. Finally, however, he was prevailed upon to accept, and his nomination, which was made at the same time as the nominations of Secretaries Fish and Boutwell, was promptly and unanimously confirmed by the Senate. To his credit be it said that his was the only Cabinet appointment which gave general satisfaction, not only to the republican supporters of President Grant, but to the democrats also. His brief administration of the department was highly satisfactory. The affairs of the army were conducted with increased efficiency. All superfluous expenses were cut off and an era of economy introduced. Personally the Secretary was energetic and attentive in the discharge of his duties. But few Cabinet Ministers before him have so fully realized the public estimate formed of their characters.

HIS PRIVATE CHARACTER.

As the reader is already aware, the disease which carried off General Rawlins was consumption. The seeds of this insidious malady were sown some six years ago, and during the gloomiest period of the war. He struggled against its encroachments as long as he could, but, as with all others like affected, he was compelled finally to succumb to it. Through the long years of suffering he unmurmuringly prepared to meet his inevitable fate. His private character was such as to inspire him with a great moral courage that robbed death of its terrors. He was a man of singularly agreeable traits. Of a calm and even temper, he won friends wherever he went, and his social relations were of the most pleasant nature. He possessed but few of what are termed small vices. It is stated of him that because of a fatal passion for intoxicating liquors on the part of his father he grew up with a horror for drunkenness and, if not a total abstainer, seldom indulged in strong drinks. His domestic life was sweet and tender. In whatever light we view General Rawlins, his taking off must be considered a national calamity. As a patriot he was ardent and devoted, as a soldier he was gallant and able, as a citizen he was law abiding, and as a husband and father he was affectionate and generous. Possessing these qualities, any faults he may have had can the more readily be forgiven and forgotten. No greater eulogium can be pronounced upon his character than that in all he did he was actuated by the purest and most conscientious of motives. He has left behind him a reputation that will endure for many years, and one that will be held up to future generations for emulation. May his spirit rest in peace!

AQUATIC.

Nassau Boat Club Regatta—Three Mile Race Won in Twenty Minutes Seven Seconds.

Two crews of the Nassau Boat Club—the crack club of the city—rowed a race on the Hudson of three miles straight in four-oared shell boats, yesterday afternoon, for the championship of the club. The course was from the pier at the foot of Seventy-first street to a stakeboat at the foot of 131st street. The crews were distinguished respectively by white and blue handkerchiefs tied round the head. Those wearing the former were J. C. Babcock, captain and bow oar; H. A. Tappin, No. 2; G. S. Walsh, No. 3; J. Miller, stroke. Those of the bright sky blue were T. B. Baldwin, captain and stroke; F. Brown, No. 2; George H. Henry, No. 3; J. B. Robert, bow. All the men had evidently undergone a recent course of hard training, as they looked not alone spare and muscular, but wore that complexion of mahogany that was so marked in the appearance of the famous Harvard four. The steamer P. C. Schultz left the pier at foot of Thirty-fourth street at half-past four o'clock with a large party of fashionable folks on board and steamed rapidly away towards Seventy-first street, as though the race were about to commence on the instant. It commenced an hour after, in deference to the usual habit of prolonged and tedious delay. The Aaron Wilbur, a black painted, antiquated and most confoundedly slow and stupid steamer, took another party from the foot of Thirty-fourth and other streets. The large attendance of fashionably dressed ladies was a noteworthy feature of the occasion, and may be easily accounted for on the score of Harvard and Oxford having turned an unusual share of public attention to aquatic sports.

Off Seventy-first street both crews made their appearance for the critical inspection of the crowds ashore and afloat. The bank of the river was dotted for a mile or so with groups of spectators, and half a score of small boats, beside the steamers, carried people about to witness the contest. A great deal of apparently unnecessary time was consumed in starting; but, as this is evidently the custom at all regattas it excited little comment of an angry nature. About half-past five the signal was given, and both crews, with the swelling tide in their favor, made away in gallant style. White, on the inside course, led at the start, making thirty-nine strokes a minute, and passing Seventy-fifth street was two lengths ahead. Both crews were pulling their level best, the blue especially exerting themselves with a hearty earnestness. At Eighty-seventh street blue and white were together, with the chances in favor of the blue. The latter finally shot ahead, but had proceeded only a short distance when they were overtaken amid the cheers of the spectators on board the Shultz. The blue were steering badly at this time, and making irregular dashes to the outside of the course, but just as they fell fairly to work for a spurting bit of rowing, which might have given them the lead, an eight-oared boat of the Atalanta Club, manned by a red-shirted crew, ran upon their rudder and stopped the further progress of the race. A cry of foul was raised, and finally, at the suggestion of General Aspinwall, referee, it was agreed to begin the race again, the Atalanta boys being given particular instructions to keep their craft off the course. The second start was promptly made, the blue having the inside. To the end of the race it was impossible to determine from the steamers which crew would win, so close and alternating were the fortunes of either side. The white, Babcock's boat, rowed with great accuracy and steadiness, but the second oar of the blue, Baldwin's boat was out of harmony with the rest and consequently an impediment. It was growing almost dark when the cheers from on board the Wilbur announced that the white passed the stakeboat at foot of 131st street—the winner in 20m. 7s.—followed closely by the blue in 20m. 12s. The judges of the races were Messrs Robert and Babcock, bow oars of either boat. The winners looked almost as fresh as when they started, and offered to row the others back, which was firmly yet politely declined.

Grand Regatta at Cherbourg, France—An American Boat Wins the First Prize in a Race with Twelve Boats.

By a private letter from Cherbourg, received by the last steamer (says the Providence Journal), we learn that a grand regatta took place at that city, the celebrated naval port in the north of France, on the Emperor's fête day (August 15), in which an American boat took part and gained the first prize. After the defeat of the Harvard crew in England the particulars of this victory may possess an interest for our readers. We are permitted to make the following extract from the letter referred to:—

CHERBOURG, August 20, 1869.

Soon after the arrival in this city of the United States frigate Sabine the city authorities sent word to her commander, Captain Walker, that there would be a regatta on the Emperor's fête day, the 15th inst., and requesting that some boats from the ship might enter and take part in it. There was, at first, a reluctance on the part of the officers to enter any boats, as the crews of the other boats taking part in the contest had doubtless been practising and were in good training; while the two days that intervened before the race would scarcely give time to select crews and give them proper training. However, Lieutenant Commander John R. Bartlett, Jr., one of the Sabine's officers, determined to enter a boat. With some difficulty he selected twelve men from the crew, and at once set to work to put them in training. In the two days that remained he was out with his crew four times a day, including evenings, thus giving his men all the practice that his limited time permitted.

The fête day came on Sunday, which day, above all others, suits the French people for an occasion like this. In the morning all attended the religious service aboard the Sabine, performed by her chaplain, the Rev. Mr. Cooper. At one o'clock Lieutenant Commander Bartlett left the ship with his boat and crew and rowed to the shore, where all the boats were assembled. There were to be altogether eight races, one of which was for large men-of-war boats or barges, and it was in this race that the boat from the Sabine was to take part. No less than twelve boats had entered for this race. The American boat drew number eight, and accordingly took the position in line at the buoy bearing this number, where it quietly lay, awaiting the hour of departure. Meanwhile the French boats were pulling up and down the line, to show off in presence of the thousands of spectators assembled on the shore. Nearly all the boats for this race pulled more oars than the Sabine's, most of them having sixteen and some of them eighteen oars; the American boat, though quite as large as any other, had but twelve—an important difference in a contest like this, and one which would have deterred most others from taking part in it.

At two o'clock the first gun was fired. In one minute after the second was fired, and the boats were off. Now "came the tug of war." Most of the crews pulled hard for the first 500 yards, leaving the Sabine's boat behind. But now Lieutenant Commander Bartlett, who understood his men, began steadily to gain, and when his boat turned the buoy, a mile off, he was eight boat lengths ahead of all. The Americans now pulled with a will, they felt their strength and knew just what they had to contend with. On they went, steadily gaining on their eleven adversaries, and when they gained and passed the Grand Stand the Sabine's boat was more than ten lengths ahead. Each boat carried a little pennant at its bow, and as the American boat passed the staff in the water, upon which the French flag was flying, Lieutenant Commander Bartlett dipped his ensign and tossed oars. His boat was at once saluted as victor by some ten thousand cheers from the assembled multitude on shore As soon as all the boats were in a barge came off and took Lieutenant Bartlett to the shore, where he was presented to the Vice Admiral commanding the port. The Admiral's boat came in second.

The first prize thus won by the Sabine's barge was 200 francs and an elegant silver medal given by the Prince Imperial.

RACING AT THE FASHION COURSE.

Three Four Mile Heats Between Flora McIvor, Privateer and Aldebaran—Flora McIvor the Winner.

The first day of the race meeting at the Fashion Course opened with a four mile heat race between Mr. Eckerson's bay mare Flora McIvor, by Lexington, dam Floride, by Wagner; T. G. Moore's bay horse Privateer, by Lightning, dam Hennie Farron; and Dr. Weldon's chesnut gelding Aldebaran, by Commodore, dam Nannie Lewis. Two other horses were entered, but did not start. These were Climax and Biddy Malone. Flora McIvor won the race after three closely contested heats, winning the first and third, Privateer taking the second. Flora McIvor, like her dam, is a stayer, and she came in at the finish of the twelfth mile like a true race horse. The "Bold Privateer" was beaten at what was supposed to be his own race—four mile heats with 100 pounds up. He was the favorite against the field, and a great deal of money was won and lost by his defeat. Aldebaran also disappointed his backers, as they supposed that he could go the journey, and the weight was just the thing for him. But four miles proved too far for him. In the second heat, when the horses merely cantered the first mile, Aldebaran was well up at the finish of the heat, but in the others, where there was running throughout, he was "nowhere." We were of the opinion when Privateer ran a dash of four miles at the Jerome Park last year that four miles were rather too far for him, and we are now stronger in that belief. He had more speed than either of the others in this race, and their dallying in the first mile of the second heat made him win it. Had the mare made running from the start in that heat we have no doubt that she would have won the race in a short rubber. Take it all through, however, it was a capital race and gave great satisfaction, particularly to the backers and owners of the mare.

We were greatly disappointed on reaching the Fashion Course to find so few of the racing men of the day in attendance. There was not a member of the American Jockey Club to be seen. The greatest number of the spectators were racing men of the old school, the admirers of heat races; but we are compelled to admit that they seem to be greatly in the minority at the present day, particularly when we compare the crowded stands at the Jerome Park and Saratoga races with the numbers present yesterday at the Fashion Course to witness a great four mile heat race. One cause, however, for the sparsity of numbers may be attributed to the slight publicity given to the affair in the public journals. There were not more than 2,000 people within the enclosures yesterday afternoon, when from 8,000 to 10,000 would have been the lowest estimate made in the morning, the weather being so delightfully suitable for the sport.

In the pool selling Privateer was the favorite against the field before the start, and after he was beaten the first he sold for more than the other two together. His winning the second heat made him a favorite at two to one against the field, and his backers fell heavily by his defeat. The track was in capital order for speed and the horses in the finest possible condition. We will now give the details of

THE RACE.

First Heat.—Aldebaran won the pole, Privateer the middle place and Flora McIvor the outside. Aldebaran took the lead at the start, Flora second, Privateer third. On the turn Aldebaran led one length, Flora second, one length ahead of Privateer. The latter then went up and took the second place, and at the quarter pole Aldebaran led one length, Privateer about one length ahead of Flora McIvor. At the half-mile pole Aldebaran was two lengths in front of Privateer, Flora one length behind. On the lower turn Aldebaran opened the daylight, and there was two lengths and a half between each of the runners. There was no change of position to the stand, and Aldebaran ran under the string two lengths ahead of Privateer, who was four lengths in front of Flora. Time of the first mile 1:59¼. Going into the next mile Privateer closed up on Aldebaran and Flora fell off a few lengths. At the quarter pole Aldebaran led one length, Privateer second, six lengths ahead of Flora McIvor. Privateer drew closer to Aldebaran on the backstretch, and at the half-mile pole was at his shoulders, Flora half a dozen lengths behind. On the Flushing end Aldebaran and Privateer were head and head; but coming to the three-quarter pole Privateer showed in front half a length. Flora was about four lengths behind. They ran strong up the homestretch, and as they passed under the string Privateer was a length in front of Aldebaran, Flora two lengths behind. The time of the two miles was 3:48¼. Going into the third mile Privateer and Aldebaran were nose and tail, but at the quarter pole Aldebaran was at his saddle girth, Flora three lengths behind. Going down the backstretch Aldebaran went up to Privateer's head, and they ran in that way past the half-mile pole, Flora two lengths behind, still biding her time. On the Flushing end Privateer again showed in front, and led one length at the three-quarter pole, and so up and under the string. Aldebaran second, two lengths ahead of Flora McIvor. The three miles were run in 5:37¼. Going into the turn on the last mile Flora McIvor made her run, and soon passed Aldebaran, and at the quarter pole was at Privateer's shoulders. Aldebaran then fell in the rear, leaving the struggle to Privateer and Flora. They raced finely down the backstretch, Privateer leading one length at the half-mile pole. He maintained his lead around the Flushing end and into the homestretch, and looked every inch a winner at that moment; but the mare then made a desperate burst and came on him so rapidly that the jockey of Privateer had to resort to the whip, which he used unsparingly, without avail, as Flora McIvor passed him and came in a winner of the heat by two lengths, Privateer second, with Aldebaran a long way off. Time of the heat, 7:35¼.

Second Heat.—Flora was the favorite against the field at long odds in the first pools sold after the previous heat, but Privateer gradually came into favor, and before the start he had the call in the betting. The horses went off at a hand gallop and continued in that way all the way around. Aldebaran was first at the start, Privateer second and Flora last. On the turn Privateer went to the front, Aldebaran second and Flora last. Aldebaran then fell in the rear, and the horses continued nose and tail until they reached the distance stand, when Flora ran up to Privateer, and they passed under the string head and head, three lengths ahead of Aldebaran. The time of the mile was 2:53¾. Privateer and Flora then sharpened their gait and ran head and head around the turn and down the backstretch, six lengths ahead of Aldebaran. At the half-mile pole Privateer showed his head in front of Flora, Aldebaran eight lengths in the rear. Going around the Flushing end Privateer led one length, which he held into the homestretch and until within a few jumps of the stand, when Flora ran up and led by a neck under the string, Privateer second, Aldebaran half a dozen lengths behind. The time of the two miles was 4:53¼. Privateer again went to the front on the turn and at the quarter pole was a neck in advance of the mare, Aldebaran being still eight lengths behind. At the half mile pole Privateer led one length, which he held around the Flushing end; but as he came into the homestretch the mare closed with him again, and as they passed under the string at the end of the mile she was a neck in advance of him. Aldebaran was now within three lengths of them. The time of the three miles was 6:53¼. Now came the tug of war. Privateer went to the front on the turn and led one length to the quarter pole, Flora second, three lengths ahead of Aldebaran. On the backstretch the jockey of Flora gave her her head and she seemed to be doing her best as she made play at Privateer, while old Aldebaran looked a dangerous customer as he began closing at the half-mile pole. Privateer still kept the lead, however, Flora second; and they ran nose and tail around the Flushing end. The race up the homestretch was fierce and gallantly contested to the end, Privateer coming in a winner by three-quarters of a length, Flora McIvor second, a trifle over a length ahead of Aldebaran. Time of the heat, 8:45.

Third Heat.—Privateer was now a greater favorite than ever, some of the backers of the other horses, being anxious, trying to hedge their money. Flora was the first away, Privateer second, Aldebaran third. Going around the turn Flora led two lengths, Privateer second, two lengths in advance of Aldebaran, and in this way they ran to the quarter pole and then to the half-mile pole; but as they got into the Flushing end Privateer shut up the daylight and was at Flora's tail as she came into the homestretch, Aldebaran four lengths in the rear. Flora again opened the light as they approached the stand and led under the string two lengths, making the first mile in 2:04, Aldebaran six lengths behind. Flora kept the gap open around the turn and to the quarter pole, when Privateer again closed up and shut out the light between them. They ran thus to the half-mile pole and along the Flushing end, and as Flora came into the stretch she was just one length in advance. Up the stretch to the stand the mare gained another length and passed under the string two lengths ahead of Privateer, who was eight lengths in front of Aldebaran. Time of the two miles, 4:05¼. Going into the third mile Privateer forced the pace and closed on Flora around the turn, and was at her saddle girth at the quarter pole, in which way they ran down the backstretch. At the half-mile pole Flora led half a length, but on the Flushing end she was a length in front. Aldebaran was six lengths in the rear as the others came into the homestretch. As Flora passed under the string at the end of the third mile she was about three-quarters of a length ahead of Privateer, the latter being about ten lengths ahead of Aldebaran. Time of the three miles, six minutes. Aldebaran then gave up the race, the old horse having no more run in him. Flora and Privateer ran bravely on, the mare leading around the upper turn half a length, which she held to the quarter pole; but getting into straight work on the backstretch Privateer went up and collared her. They ran side and side past the half-mile pole; but in getting into the Flushing end Privateer began to show in front, and gradually drew away from the mare until he was entirely clear of her, and every beholder of the struggle supposed that he was to be winner of the race. When they were approaching the three-quarter pole, however, a change in the minds of the people took place. The jockey of the mare, knowing that she had a brush left, let her loose, and in a few strides she was at Privateer's head, and then in a few more jumps she was clear of him. The jockey of Privateer tried all his arts to rally the horse again, but failed, and Flora McIvor left him and came home a winner of the heat and race by four lengths in 7:51¼. Aldebaran was distanced. The following is a

THE NATIONAL GAME.

Atlantic vs. Eckford for the Championship.

Since so-called "exhibition games" have become the fashion between clubs aspiring to the empty and dubious title, "champions," the interest in contests between the leading professional clubs had almost entirely died out. People who admire base ball are willing to pay to see a well played game; but when they are cajoled into paying for the privilege of being present at a game in which neither club has anything to lose in being defeated and lacks, therefore, the necessary incentive to work hard. It was rumored that the game arranged to come off yesterday at the Capitoline Grounds, between the Atlantics and the Eckfords, was to be another of those "exhibition games;" but the directors of the clubs came to the rescue and assured the public that it was to be a bona fide contest aiming towards the right to the coveted title. As it was the first meeting of the clubs since the Eckfords became possessed of "the whip" a great deal of anxiety was manifested as to the probable result. Many asserted that the Atlantics could not bat Martin with any show of success, and that the Eckford's fielders were as good as those of the Atlantic's, and that, therefore, consequently, under the circumstances, and so forth, the Eckfords must win. This line of argument was confined almost exclusively to the residents of "Ghost-town." The Brooklynites proper, however, spoke quite differently. They seemed to think that the sturdy Atlantics would "hammer" Martin and, as some of them said, "knock the life out of the Eckfords." Yesterday opened very promisingly and, although there were two or three threatening spells during the day, the weather remained as fine as anybody could wish for. Of course there was an immense crowd present—probably from 8,000 to 10,000—and the usual good-natured sallies and repartee were indulged in while the preliminaries were being settled. The betting men were present in force, but in respect to the rules of the ground their operations were carried on very quietly. The odds were largely in favor of the Atlantics, but there were not very many takers, as the "glorious uncertainty of the game" has come to be recognized, and the wagering is done now chiefly on the innings. By this plan the excitement is kept up throughout the game no matter which party may be ahead. When the preliminaries had all been arranged and Mr. McMahon, of the Mutual Club, chosen to act as umpire, was commenced with the Atlantics at the bat. Martin was pitching very neatly, and Pearce getting "the range" sent the ball to short stop. Hodes picked it up, and although Pearce "picked up his heels" and made for first the ball was there ahead of him and he retired. Smith followed Pearce and in the same path, hitting to short and going out at first. This looked like work and the applause rang from all quarters of the field in good style, but it was completely drowned by the thunders which rose shortly after, when Start hit a "sockdolager" to right field and "paddled all the way around." Chapman followed with a hit to third base, which was slightly muffed, and he got his run by Ferguson's hit. Ferguson was left on first by Crane, who popped the ball up for Nelson and was caught on the fly. The Eckfords commenced well, as Allison and Patterson and Martin batted safely for their bases. The first two got in, but Martin was forced out at second by Nelson, who was himself disposed of at first, Crane and Start doing the work neatly. Hodes had a life given him by McDonald, but he was left on the third base by Jewett, to whom McDonald paid attention. The score being even a good game throughout was confidently expected; but in the next inning the Atlantics batted handsomely and heavily, Pike, McDonald, Smith and Start each securing their runs after good hits, McDonald's and Start's being home runs. Zettlein struck out, Pearce fell between Hodes and Allison for the second time, and Chapman was cared for by Nelson. On the Eckford side Jewett on a foul bound, Wood by Crane, and Start and Pinkham by Pike followed each other on the retiring list in quick succession. It is needless to follow the game through its ins and outs, as the interest began to flag at this period, and the impression seemed to prevail that the Atlantics were in the winning mood and fearfully determined. In the fourth inning, the Eckfords, going into the bat and standing seven behind their opponents, commenced by batting finely to creep up to and finally led the score of the others. The excitement now was intense, and as batter after batter hit hard and safely he was cheered tumultuously. The Eckfords, however, did not keep up the spurt but one inning longer, and the Atlantics with their steady stroke held their own and soon again passed and distanced their contestants. The score given below will show that in the sixth inning the Atlantics gained such a lead as the Eckfords could not overcome unless by another and a harder spurt than their former one. They were not able to get it on, and the old "roarers" continued increasing the distance between the "teams" until all hope of the others recovering the lost ground was completely gone. The Eckfords played pluckily along, however, making few errors in the field; but the Atlantics were on the bat and the way they did "stick" to Martin was a caution. That the game was won by the batting may be judged from the score, although the fielding of the Atlantics was generally very fine. The fielding on both sides was good, but it was fated that the Eckfords should lose, and lose they did, with the score standing as follows:—

The Union Base Ball Park at Tremont will be opened to-day, when a game will be played between the Union and Oriental. This contest has nothing to do with the coolie trade.

The game at Philadelphia yesterday was exciting in the extreme, and the Haymakers and their friends had every reason to feel confident up to the last inning, as may be judged from the following inning score:—

The Turco-Egyptian Question and Policy of the Sultan.

Trades' Unionism and the Land Tenure Agitation in England.

The steamship City of Washington, Captain Jones, from Liverpool the 26th and Queenstown the 27th of August, arrived at this port yesterday, bringing a mail report, with our special correspondence, in detail of our cable telegrams, dated to her day of sailing from Ireland.

The official report on the Senatus Consultum, as read in the French Senate, points out the results which have attended the legislation of 1852, namely, "tranquillity, development of public education, increased wealth. France," it says, "supported by 1,400,000 soldiers, ready to proceed to the frontier, respected by all Powers—in a word, the country has passed from a dictatorship to the most complete liberty." The report states, in conclusion, that the generation of 1869 can still improve upon that of 1852 should it consolidate the work which has been undertaken.

The delegates to the Trades' Union Congress of Great Britain assembled in Birmingham, August 25. Before the reading of papers commenced it was arranged that each speaker should be limited to five minutes. Mr. Shorrocks, of the Amalgamated Tailors' Society, Manchester, read a very lengthy paper on "Trades' Unions Legislation and the Commissioners Report." The writer referred to the unfortunate circumstances which led to the royal commission, admitting that the inquiry revealed outrages by unionists, but expressing a belief that the common law was sufficient to meet such cases without special legislation. The following resolution was adopted:—

That in the opinion of this congress the principles contained in the paper just read are worthy of our cordial support, and that the time has arrived when all especial legislation in regard to labor should be abolished; that the organization of workingmen should be placed in the same position as other legal associations, and that the trades throughout the country be recommended to get up a united and vigorous agitation for the accomplishment of this object; and it is further resolved that this Congress objects to any bill which shall claim the right of the supervision of the books and funds of trades' unions more than generally prevails in dealing with other associations.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times, writing on the Cuban question, under date of the 23d of August, says:—

The reports spread that the new American Minister at Madrid, General Sickles, had made overtures to the Spanish government with respect to the sale of the island were, up to a very recent date, quite unfounded. A mediation between the insurgents and the mother country would be more probable, any arrangements that might be come to obtaining, perhaps, the guarantee of the United States. There are obvious reasons why America may not desire to annex the island at the present time, and might prefer seeing it for awhile in a transition state of independence.

The lawyers in England are engaged in argument as to the classification of an earthquake, on a point raised at the Liverpool assizes. The cause had reference to the non-delivery of a cargo of nitrate of soda, and it was pleaded in answer that the cargo had been destroyed by an earthquake off the Peruvian coast. Then arose the knotty point whether the earthquake was an "accident" or a "circumstance," and this has been left for the judges to decide.

The London Globe of the 26th of August refers to the reported non-ratification of the Burlingame treaty by the Chinese, saying:—

We sincerely sympathize with Mr. Burlingame on the failure of his mission. A gentleman of an enthusiastic temperament, he was induced, from an earnest desire for the improvement of China, to believe completely in the tricky professions of the Pekin government. Refusals to ratify treaties being not unknown in American diplomacy we do not suppose the government of the United States will take much notice of the Pekin Cabinet.

A light submarine cable, on Professor Varley's principle, is contemplated between Ireland and America.

Eighty coal miners delegates were present at an adjourned conference, held at the Manchester Mechanics' Institution August 23. The first question was whether a demand for a general increase of wages should be made at once. It was decided to continue the agitation in the coal districts for another month with a view to securing union among the colliers.

Speaking of the proposed newspaper reporting machine, the London Spectator says:—

There are very few speakers in either House whose speeches, thus reported, would not be wearisome in the extreme, full of repetitions, mental stammerings and mistakes, which the reporter at present omits. Perhaps four men in the Commons, Mr. Gladstone, Mr. Bright, Mr. Disraeli and Sir J. Coleridge, could stand it; but to the majority of speakers phonographic reporting would be ruin.

A despatch from Constantinople of the 24th of August says that Talaat Pacha, First Secretary of the Viceroy of Egypt, had arrived in that city and handed a letter from the Viceroy to the Sultan.

TURKEY.

Imperial Position Towards the Viceroy of Egypt—The Grand Vizier's Letter—Influence of the Suez Canal in State Affairs—Hereditary Succession and the Sultan's Son—Family Claims and What Result—Halim Pacha, His Interest, Sports and Associations.

CONSTANTINOPLE, August 16, 1869.

The letter of his Highness Aali Pacha, Grand Vizier, to the Viceroy of Egypt, Ismail Pacha, will serve to explain to you fully the nature of the complaints of the Sultan against the latter. We now wait to receive the reply and explanations. No one here believes that this difficulty between the Sultan and his vassal will gravitate into an open breach of the peace, though perhaps a few persons hope it may. These are the brother of the Viceroy and the uncle, Mustapha Fazil Pacha and Halim Pacha. The latter is the grandson of the old Mohammed Ali Pacha, founder of the present dynasty of Egypt.

There is no reason to suppose that the Viceroy fears any warlike action on the part of the Porte. All Europe is now peacefully disposed, and the Porte has just come out of a protracted and expensive civil war, to suppress the insurrection in Candia, and cannot well afford to enter into a new conflict. Its finances are still in a bad condition, and it has just made a new loan of £12,000,000 at a more favorable rate than the preceding ones. On the other hand the Viceroy has no spare cash, and could not make a loan for a war which would jeopardize his own position and consequent means of paying it. His naval force is very small, and as he has acted most despotically over the poor Fellahs of Egypt there is small sympathy for him among that class of people. In fact, his chief supporters would be his immediate officers and the speculators who live on his favor and bounty in Egypt.

From Europe the Viceroy can reasonably expect no countenance, and, much less, any effectual assistance. Several of the greater Powers are associated in the terms of the Sultan's firman, which conferred Egypt upon the family of old Mohammed Ali Pacha under certain conditions. These have been changed from time to time, always in favor of the incubus of the Viceroyalty, but can also be placed back by the Sultan to their original status in case of need. It is supposed that France particularly protects Ismail Pacha, the present Viceroy, and that there is a constant rivalry for influence and power in Egypt between the French and British Consuls General. There may be some truth in this. The French have the Suez Canal and the route to India to look after. The promoter of the former is M. Ferdinand de Lesseps, whose father was for many years French Consul General at Philadelphia. He died at Tunis, Barbary, in the same capacity, well advanced in years. Madame Lesseps, mother of Ferdinand and Jules Lesseps, was a Spanish lady, first cousin of the mother of the present Empress of France, so that there is a close connection between her and the promoter of the Suez Canal. This will serve to explain the protection which M. Ferdinand Lesseps has always had at the Tuileries for his Egyptian project and enterprise, and the visit which the Empress is now about to make to Egypt on the occasion of its termination. She is expected to arrive here about the 20th of September, and after a stay of some ten days will proceed to Alexandria, with or without the company of the Sultan. The difficulty between the Sultan and the Viceroy occurs at an unfortunate moment for the latter. It must also be one of some embarassment to the French Court. On the other hand, the British government will not be displeased with it, inasmuch as it checkmates French influence and prestige and takes away much of the lustre and éclat of the affair of the canal. It is not believed that any sovereigns will honor the opening of the canal with their presence. They will be represented either by the ordinary Consuls General now in Egypt or by special commissioners. The attempt, therefore, of the Viceroy to invite them on his own part is a complete failure. His duty was first to invite his own sovereign and ask him to invite the others, though it is more than probable that either the latter would not have been done, or, if done, that none would have accepted the invitation. His sudden and rather mysterious withdrawal of his troops from the island of Candia, during the late insurrection there, now also forms one of the charges against him. It was well understood at the time that the Viceroy entertained hopes of getting the lion's part of this island, and that the Sultan, rather than give it up to Greece, would have made it over to him. When this hope failed him he withdrew his forces and waited for events. The result is known.

A few years ago the Viceroy (a European term not recognized in Turkey, and which has no equivalent in the Turkish language), succeeded in prevailing upon the Sultan to make a change in the law of inheritance of the Koran in favor of his son. To effect this he increased the tribute payable by Egypt to the Sultan, and made very costly presents both to certain functionaries of the Porte and to the members of the Sultan's palace. It is supposed to have been arranged for him by the late Fuad Pacha, who, probably having had reason to believe that the Sultan desired to effect the same for his own son presented this, both as an experiment in the minds and opinions of the Mussulman population and to pay court to his sovereign. This has not met with favor among the elder Moslems, and so far as the son of the Sultan is concerned remains in abeyance. It deprived Mustpaha Fazil Pacha, his only brother, of his birthright, and, like Esau against Jacob, has created a feud between the two brothers which no truce can allay. Formerly the brother used to reside in Egypt, but the Viceroy desired to get rid of him and succeeded in inducing him to establish himself on the Bosphorus. He took possession of all of his property, said to be valued at £2,000,000, and having effected a loan on this as security, allows him six per cent on the amount for his subsistence. Notwithstanding the fund at first alluded to the wronged brother has never ceased to protest against the loss of his proper inheritance. He generally lives at Constantinople, though almost annually he makes a visit to Europe, and is generally to be found at Baden Baden or Homburg, where he breaks the banks or gets "cleaned out" by them.

His yalée or summer house, at Kawdiller, on the Asiatic side of the Bosphorus, is one of the finest edifices on that beautiful stream. His household is said to contain near three hundred souls, all told, of the three human genders. It is a matter of surprise to many how he can cover the expenses of such a retinue. His fêtes are magnificent, his hospitality quite unbounded, and his losses at cards after dinner are something fabulous. He is blind of one eye, the result of ophthalmia, but the defect is made up as far as external appearances are concerned by one of glass; and it is finally admitted that he sees pretty sharply with the good one, though after all, with a one-side vision of things. Of this he has been accused by the late Fuad Pacha to the Sultan, when he undertook the very dangerous experiment, in this country, of making some unfavorable revelations to the latter about the administration of that able and witty Minister. His course on this occasion resulted in an order to leave Stamboul within forty-eight hours, and he made exceedingly good time on his way to Paris. When the Sultan was in this capital, or, perhaps, rather in London, in 1867, Fuad Pacha generously induced the Sultan to pardon the defect in his vision and to restore him to favor, so that in September of the same year he was enabled to return to his villa on the Bosphorus. To the present time he remained out of office, and, to use the Turkish expression on such occasions, "occupies himself in praying for the long life of the Sultan." It is supposed that during the visit of the Prince of Wales here he found the means of approaching the Sultan and of again ingratiating himself in his favor.

The result is the present désagrément for his brother, Ismail Pacha, Viceroy of Egypt. About the same time that the latter succeeded in changing the inheritance of Egypt in favor of his son, the so-called Viceroy, he procured also a new title, which he has since then assumed, of Khedive. This is at least but a vague one, borrowed from the Persian language, in which it signifies a hereditary satrap. After the conquest of Persia by the earlier Arabian caliphs the latter confirmed the Khedives, or satraps of its provinces appointed by the Sassanian kings, but their tenure of office depended upon the favor of the Moslem caliph of the time being. Gradually they were all replaced by Mussulmans from Mecca or Medina, so that nothing remained but the title now borne by a Moslem Governor General of the Ottoman province of Egypt, or Missir. Ismail Pacha has asked for the other titles, neither of which were for him—viz., of Malik, or king (also possessor), and Aziz, in compliment to his Sultan, Abdul Aziz.

Mustapha Fazil Pacha is, therefore, a man of "great expectations;" but to any one who is a close observer of matters and things in the East it is pretty reasonable to suppose that, for the present at least, these must be deferred. He has quite a number of children, though, as polygamy punishes itself, not so many as he might be supposed to have, in view of the size of his harem arrangements. Among his humble retainers are people of various nationalities, but the French prevails. He has a French and English governess for his female children and French tutors for the males. His stables contain from eighty to one hundred horses, and a host of carriages. None of his family are in office, perhaps on account of their youth. The Sultan has just named him a Minister of his Privy Council, and so he has again become one of the highest functionaries of the government.

Halim Pacha, the uncle of the Viceroy, is quite a different man. He is a Nimrod, and cares little for the allurements of office, harem gratifications or other amusements than those of cards. He also has hired a fine summer house on the Asiatic shore of the Bosphorus, in the village of Kanlijâ, and lives in fine style, though far inferior to that of his nephew. As he was compelled to leave his immense palace called Chubrâ, in Cairo, to save himself from arrest by his other nephew, the Viceroy, his family remained there. In consequence of this, and of the absence of his usual family arrangements, Mustapha Fazil Pacha, his nephew, it is said, sent him over a half a dozen of his own Circassian female slaves, to fill up vacancies. This is very often done in the East by one's friends when one has the misfortune to lose or be separated from his wife or wives. It is a very touching mode of showing sympathy and an interest in the domestic comforts of the bereaved. As slavery has been abolished in the United States it is too late to think of adopting the custom there. Halim Pacha is what may be called a "fine fellow," and only a little spoiled by the ivy vines which cling around him in the shape of humble satellites and adulate him overmuch. His breakfasts and dinners are good, his wines excellent. It don't pay, however, to remain late and play cards. "Son Altesse, Monseigneur," plays well, so do the ivy vines before alluded to. This is also particularly the case with his nephew, Mustapha Fazil Pacha. One must be a rich banker or a speculator in consolidés to hold out long with him. A few thousand dollars change hands speedily at his table, though it is true that what is lost one day may be regained the next. This does not hold good, however, as a principle, and it is more prudent not to act upon it incautiously. Cards can be seen with one eye as well as with two. Halim Pacha, as before stated, is a Nimrod, and keeps a pack of hounds for hunting bears, deer, wild boars, &c. He has no taste for smaller game. He is withal a Freemason of the very highest grade and Grand Master of all Masons in Egypt, and as such has many friends among the fraternity of the mystic rite.

Preparations for Eugenie's Reception—The Harem Being Placed in Order.

A letter from Constantinople of the 16th of August contains the following report of the royal preparations which were being made for the reception of the Empress of France in that city.

The writer says:—"Probably history records nothing in the way of sumptuous ceremonies which can be compared to the fetes intended to celebrate the visit of the Empress Eugénie to this capital. The Turks are desirous to show the extent of their esteem for France by the reception which they will give to the consort of Napoleon III. More than 6,000 workmen are occupied in finishing the road of Buyukderé and the newly formed streets of the city. That number is increased day by day, and will soon be doubled, and even tripled; everything must be ready for the 20th of September at any cost. The whole Turkish fleet (thirty war vessels) will await the august voyageur at Corfu. Roouf Pacha, Grand Master of the Palace, and Kiamil Bey, Master of the Ceremonies, are appointed to go and present the first compliments of the Sultan. The Empress will renounce her incognito on her entrance into Turkish waters. The finishing touch is being put to the splendid caique in which Abdul Aziz will meet her Majesty and conduct her to the Palace of Beyler Bey. A gala performance will be given at the opera, all hung with velvet and silk for the occasion; and the singers who are to have the honor of appearing, will arrive from London and Paris. By the Sultan's order specimens of all the products of the empire are being collected at the Bazaar. The Empress and her suite will only be perplexed by the difficulty of making a choice.

The imperial harem, conducted by the Sultana Valide, will pay a visit in great state to her Majesty. But what is to surpass all that fancy can imagine will be the soirée preceeding the day of the Empress' departure. After a review in the plain of Beicos, and a luncheon of which the bill of fare is a State business, the illustrious company will descend the Bosphorus to Beyler Bey. Nearly all the vessels that the Ottoman empire can furnish will be present to accompany the imperial yacht, and the flags seen by day will be replaced by myriads of lights. The palace and the houses on both shores will be illuminated throughout the immense extent of the sea, and enormous fires will be lighted on the mountains of Europe and Asia.

The estimated cost of these enchantments is 15,000,000 francs.

The Land Question—The Grand Issue Between Democracy and Aristocracy.

The Manchester Examiner of the 24th of August calls attention to the following condensed report of an important meeting:—

A meeting of the working classes was held on Sunday morning on Clerkenwell Green, under the auspices of the Holborn (London) branch of the Reform League, for the purpose of hearing a lecture from Mr. C. Bradlaugh on "The Land and the People." There were about 1,000 persons present, Mr. Osborne being in the chair. The lecturer said that to obtain life and happiness from the land was the right of all, and if there were any barrier in the way the attention of the people should be directed to its removal. The landowners of the country numbered but 30,000, and, while in 1800 the land was taxed to the amount of £2,300,000, the rent received by the landed aristocracy being £22,500,000, in 1869 the rent received had increased to over £66,000,000, while the taxes paid had decreased to £1,750,000, in consequence of the redemption of the land tax. Referring to Mr. Mill's statement that the landed aristocracy had "grown rich while they slept," Mr. Bradlaugh said that it was not so, for the heads of families being provided for by the law of primogeniture and entail, the aristocracy had provided for the younger sons in other ways out of the country's earnings. The rights of property in land were different from those in possessions acquired by labor, and those who owned land now had no right to shut it up for pleasure when it would produce grain for the starving millions. He advocated reform in the land laws—firstly, because they had it in their power to reform them; secondly, because it was lawful; thirdly, because whether it was lawful or not they could do it, meaning thereby that the happiness of the nation was higher than mere legal right. The fact that England is a monarchical government was denied, the government being that of a landed aristocracy. He did not advocate the equal distribution of land, but he asked that the cultivator of the soil should share in the profits of his labor.

A eulogium of Mr. Gladstone closed the lecture.

A vote of thanks was given to the lecturer, and other speeches terminated the proceedings.

SCOTLAND.

The William Wallace Monument.

[From the Edinburg Scotsman, August 21.]

Yesterday the Town Council of Stirling, in accordance with the resolution come to at the last meeting of the Council, drove to the Abbey Craig for the purpose of inspecting the National Wallace Monument, preparatory to receiving the custody of it as patrons of Cowane's Hospital. At the summit of the Craig the Council were received by Mr. Burns, writer, Glasgow, one of the members of the acting committee; Mr. E. Morrison, Secretary; Mr. Peter Drummond, treasurer, and Mr. McLean, superintendent of the works. The Council then proceeded to inspect the monument, and at the top had an opportunity of viewing the surrounding country by means of a large and powerful telescope, which had been presented to the National Wallace Monument, along with a sum of money, by "the Scottish nation in Ipswich, June 24, 1865."

A meeting of the Council was held on the Abbey Craig after the inspection, Provost Rankin presiding. Mr. Burns then shortly explained, on behalf of the Building Committee, what was the object of the present meeting. He had to ask the gentlemen connected with Cowane's Hospital, to whom the structure was ultimately to be handed over, along with the Lords Lieutenants of the counties of Stirling, Clackmannan and Perth, the Sheriffs Depute of the said counties, and the Dean of the Guildry and Provost of Stirling, to look at the structure which now stood before them, and satisfy themselves as to whether it came up to what was promised. He had no doubt every one who made this visit must be impressed with the magnitude and grandeur of the building, which was now nearly finished. The expenditure had exceeded £13,000, and the structure when finished would cost nearly £14,000. As originally calculated, the cost was only to have been £7,000, but that estimate must have proceeded upon very grave miscalculations. The committee were anxious to bring the work to a close, and they contemplated the possibility or probability of doing so, and being able to hand it over to the custodians on the 11th of September, the anniversary of the battle of Stirling Bridge. Mr. Burns referred to the statement regarding the portions of the work yet to be completed, saying the committee would be able to execute the first three items, amounting to £172, and were in the hope that Cowane's Hospital might be able to take over the custody of the building and execute the remainder of the work, amounting to £200 or thereabouts. The committee were under obligations to the extent of £600, but they did not ask the Council to have anything to do with that. They only wished them to undertake the remaining portions of the work, and he was quite willing to give Cowane's Hospital a guarantee that if, at the end of two seasons, or any other time they might fix, they were not reimbursed, he would pay the amount expended himself. Bailie Christie said it occurred to him that if Mr. Burns would embody his remarks in the form of a letter it might be considered in committee, and a special meeting of council could afterwards be held to dispose of the matter. This was agreed to.

Mr. Hogg then moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Burns for the energy he had displayed in connection with the building of the monument. Bailie Yellowlees seconded the motion, which was unanimously agreed to, and suitably acknowledged by Mr. Burns.

THE LOWELL (MASS.) PIE POISONING CASE.

Examination of Miss Louisa W. Miner, Charged with Attempting to Poison Dr. L. W. Jenness—Interesting Developments—Jealousy the Cause of the Act—The Personal and Business Relations of the Parties—The Defendant "Nobody's Child."

LOWELL, Mass., Sept. 4, 1869.

The examination of Miss Louisa W. Miner on a charge of attempting to take the life of Dr. Lemuel W. Jenness, of this city, was commenced in the Police Court to-day before Judge Crosby. At an early hour the court room had filled to repletion so quickly by curious spectators of both sexes that it was found necessary to adjourn the examination to the large room. The case attracts intense interest in this section of country. People came from all adjacent parts in all sorts of vehicles, bringing their luncheon with them. As on all similar occasions the audience was composed mostly of women. One determined dame appeared with three children and her knitting work. The plaintiff in this case is a well known practitioner for twenty years, and the defendant is widely known as a nurse of skill and high temper. Jenness received a diploma from the Worcester Medical Eclectic Institute, and has always been held in good estimation among his townsmen. He has resided in Lowell about six years, and has known Miss Miner some twelve years, first professionally.

The counsel in the case are Messrs. Stevens & Anderson and T. Wentforth for the defence, and Messrs. A. R. Brown and D. O. Allen for the government. The indictment contains four counts, complaining that Louisa W. Miner, on the 8th of August last, attempted to take the life of Lemuel W. Jenness. Stated briefly, the first count charges a mingling of arsenic with food with intent to kill; second, charges an attempt to commit the crime of murder by administering arsenic; third, charges a mingling of a poison unknown to the complainant with food with intent to kill; fourth, charges an attempt to commit the crime of murder by administering a certain poison unknown to the defendant. The first and third counts refer to the arsenic alleged to have been put in the pies.

On the opening of the case for the government it appeared that Miss Miner had been a frequent visitor in the family of Dr. Jenness for ten years or more—not a boarder, but a visitor; that she had always thought as much of the members of the family as though they had been of her own blood relation; that she had nursed both Mrs. Jenness and the Doctor in sickness; that the family had been very kind to her, as much so as if she had really been one of their number. But out of this it is hypotheticated that as a motive for the deed with which she is charged, the defendant had been for some months in a morbid state of mind, bordering on jealousy, as if fearing that some other person might supplant her in the affections of Dr. Jenness and his family.

It was also stated that one day in August the defendant went to Dr. Jenness' house and said she wanted to make some apple pies for the Doctor. The request was an unusual one, and the domestics in the house, knowing something of the feelings of the defendant, objected to her making the pies. But she persisted and made four pies and a turnover. She was very particular in her directions what should be done with the pies. One she directed to be saved for the Doctor and two were to be sent to the family at the seaside. At tea time the meal was prepared by the domestic (Miss Stevens) and no pies were put on the table. The defendant asked why they did not eat one; said she would get one, which she did, and cut it into four pieces, and ate one of them herself. The others declined to eat any, but the man (Johnson) finally ate a piece.

When Dr. Jenness returned from the seaside the domestics quietly informed him of their suspicions, which he made fun of and treated very lightly. They persisted, however, in asking him not to eat the pies. The Doctor thereupon thought he would ascertain if there was anything in the matter and so he told the City Marshal the circumstances and that officer went and took possession of the pies and put Miss Miner in durance vile. The Doctor never saw the pies referred to until the City Marshal took them into his custody. One of them was immediately examined and five grains of arsenic found in it. The Doctor did not taste of the pies, but he drank tea and sugar at his house and felt sick thereafter, and Dr. Gage told him that he showed symptoms of arsenical poisoning.

About four weeks prior to this circumstance Miss Miner was at Dr. Jenness' house. In her presence at the tea table Mrs. Jenness asked the Doctor if he would bring a Miss Lenfest, a young lady who had visited the family, home with him the next morning when he went down town, as he proposed doing. He assented. Upon this the defendant got up and left the table, and did not return, exhibiting some feeling. Early the next morning the Doctor got up and found defendant already up, and she asked him if he was going to bring home the lady above referred to. He said he was; to which the defendant said, "You are not going to do it," accompanying her words with a threat that if he did she would ruin him and his family. These threats she afterwards repeated to the girls, and said she would do it. At another time she repeated the threat, and added to a Miss Swett, "If it hadn't been for what you said to me while in bed on the morning of the fifth of July, I should have done what I meant to." This is supposed to have referred to some violence to Mrs. Jenness.

On the 10th of August Miss Miner visited the house of the Doctor and made particular inquiries if the pies she had made had been sent to the seaside or if they had been eaten. But to the testimony. The first witness called was

Dr. L. W. Jenness, who testified substantially as follows:—On the morning of July 5 there were some suspicious circumstances that occurred through Miss Miner; on the previous evening at tea table witness' wife had told witness that next morning he must call for Miss Lenfest on his way home from the city and must bring her to his house; upon this the defendant burst out crying and left the table; after tea he found her crying back of the barn; he went to her and remonstrated with her; asked her what she was crying for; she said, "You know I won't have that girl up here;" witness further remonstrated with her and left her; the next morning witness got up about four o'clock and found defendant already up, in the wash-room; saluted her with "Good morning, Louisa;" defendant started forward and exclaimed that "she wanted to know one thing—if he was going to bring that thing home with him to-day?" he said he was, as "little mother" (a term applied to Mrs. Jenness) wanted her to come; defendant said, "So you are going to do it—well, there is one thing I want you to understand—if you do I will be the ruin of you and your family, if it sends me to h—;" witness replied, "That settles it," and said in effect that he was not to be dictated to as to who should visit in his family; defendant was crying; there had been no difficulty between the family prior to this; after the young lady referred to was brought into the house she remarked that the house was not big enough to contain them both; she also said, "Remember, Doctor, what I told you this morning, and I mean it;" I went to the beach somewhere about the middle of July; after I informed the City Marshal of my apprehensions in regard to the pies, I met Miss Miner at my office door; she remarked that she wanted me to bring down a note from the house; I made no answer; she then asked me what the matter was; I told her I did not feel very well; I started then for the apothecary's; when she asked what the matter was, she commenced to cry; this was on Tuesday night; I did not see her again that evening; the next morning I gave directions to have the pies buried; I carried part of them out myself; on Monday night we had warm biscuit for supper; on Tuesday night I don't remember what we had; on Wednesday morning I had tea for breakfast; after breakfast, on Wednesday morning, I felt a burning sensation and illness which I had experienced the day and night previous; I became alarmed; went up stairs and found the girls who were residing at my house in a still more alarming condition than myself; it occurred to me that I had some magnesia, and mixing it with water I drank it myself; my next thought was to sent for help; I started myself, and after getting part way down town I felt in an excruciating condition, and by the time I got to my office I found that I could do nothing for myself, and I drove to Dr. Gage's and told him that I thought I was badly poisoned; the doctor felt of my pulse, and at once started for the apothecary shop; I was on the sofa when the doctor returned; I do not know what he administered; I was affected with this burning sensation in my bowels; my legs were numb and I felt prostrated; I have had in my practice cases of poisoning; my symptoms were the same as in the cases of those whom I had attended; for ten days I felt somewhat prostrated and do still; from my time of coming from the beach to a week from the next Saturday I lost thirty-two pounds of flesh; I did not put any arsenic in those pies; I did not put any in any of the eatables or drinkables used in my house; defendant was at witness' house only one Sabbath in July as he remembered; he went to the seaside about the middle of July, with his family, and spent every Sabbath with them.

This ended the direct examination.

On the cross-examination witness said he had acted as medical adviser of defendant since his fever, when she nursed him; was consulted as to disease of the womb and treated her; the examinations were all at the house; made no examinations within two years; witness also testified that he had in years past taken meals with the defendant occasionally in her rooms; was not in the habit of taking her to ride elsewhere than to witness' house; the doctor further denied ever borrowing money of Miss Miner, but he did loan some money for her to a woman on the Tremont corporation and took a mortgage in his name; paid her all the money received; sometimes defendant put money in his hands to keep a while; did not make a practice of going to her room, but may have done so at times; witness went to his office before he went home on Monday, August 9; came home on first train from Salem; rode home with Mr. Lang about noon; left home after dinner and returned about seven o'clock; had tea at supper, also next day at breakfast and dinner, but not at night; had tea again Wednesday morning; buried the flour, sugar, spices and preserves in a hole dug by Mr. Dutton; had lately bought two barrels of flour, and but little had been used from either; had about eight inches of flour taken out of each barrel and buried, and ordered the rest fed to the hogs; buried all the sugar he had, both white and brown; there were but five or six pounds of white and but little of brown; had not seen the pies since Mr. Lang took them; gave Mr. Lang no instructions what to do with the pies, but Mr. Lang said he should take them to Dr. Kidder to be analyzed; witness said to Mr. Lang that Dr. Kidder and he were not particular friends, but he thought the doctor had honor enough to do justice in such a case; the Doctor also testified that he had found defendant frequently in tears at his house, as far back as June, or before, and that he had corresponded with her when she had been away; last fall and winter Miss Miner became cross and testy, and she never said to witness that she would at some time make an exposure.

Dr. Gage, who has been in practice in Lowell fifteen years, stated that Dr. Jenness called on the day of the supposed poisoning; his appearance was excited, &c., and he had all the symptoms of arsenic poisoning, and gave him magnesia and preparation of iron; witness went home with Jenness, and there saw two ladies lying on one bed exhibiting like symptoms, and administered remedies as in the Doctor's case; did not look at the drool or expectoration at the house and made no analysis of the contents of the stomach; witness was educated at Harvard College and New York hospitals.

Miss Georgiana Stevens testified—Since November had remained at Dr. Jenness' for medical treatment, doing housework as she was able; Miss Miner had generally been there Saturdays and Sundays; heard no threats from her, but had heard of them; had seen Louisa crying often; had heard her say she "should put an end to happiness in the Doctor's family this fall;" was at home and saw Louisa making the pies before the Doctor's return from Marblehead; watched her and saw her finish making two pies, but the rest were made while Louisa turned her back; this was Sunday night; after that found her in the cook room, where the pies were; the Doctor came home Monday and dined at home; witness remonstrated against the Doctor's eating of the pies, but he said perhaps he should eat them; Mr. Lang came afterward and took the pies away; Dr. Gage administered to witness as well as Miss Swett and the Doctor; the hired man ate pie and cake made out of the same barrel that Louisa used for the pies made by her; the hired man is now living; the hired man buried the pie and cake not eaten.

On the cross-examination witness told defendant that she did not think the apples were good enough for the pies; defendant replied that she had made good pies from small apples; witness stood in the door while defendant made the pies; did not go round to watch defendant when she turned her back; might have done so; did not see defendant use anything in making the pies but what is required in making apple pies; was alone in the house with defendant; the other persons were out doors and did not come in until after the pies were done; witness ate part of the turnover; three of the pies were made on large plates and one on a small plate; defendant cut one of the large pies; have heard unpleasant words between defendant and Dr. Jenness; one Saturday she cried all the evening and night because he called her Louisa; the Doctor carried her home that evening between six and seven o'clock, and returned between ten and eleven o'clock; defendant said the family were turning the cold shoulder on her and bestowing their love on some one else not half as worthy; Miss Lenfest was meant; witness made up her mind that she would not eat any of the pies and that the Doctor shouldn't.

Miss Maria Swett, an invalid, after corroborating all the previous testimony as to the Doctor's going away to the seaside, and to being at the Doctor's house on the 4th and 5th of July, said that she had known Miss Miner four years and never knew her to cook anything but the pies involved in this case; on Sunday night, July 4, when I went to sit down to the supper table, Miss Miner also started to sit down; Mrs. Jenness said, "Louisa, come round here;" she burst into tears and left the table; after I went to bed Miss Miner came in to see me and said she would never see another sunrise; she had no friends and no confidence in any one. She here repeated the conversation that occurred between her and the Doctor in the morning about the house not being big enough to hold them both. I told her that I did not like to hear her talk so; we all had friends and a kind Heavenly Father watching over us, One whom we can trust in all circumstances. She made no reply to this, but continued to cry. After this she went away with the Doctor. She did not make any mention of Mrs. Jenness in this connection. She came back to the Doctor's next Saturday night. On the next morning Miss Miner said to me that she certainly would have done what she said she would but for what I had said to her. She said that the Doctor and his wife had made her and Miss Lenfest enemies; said she hated Miss Lenfest because she hated her; said she could not bear to have Miss Lenfest treated better than her, as she was not half as worthy; she would have her revenge; she also said that she wished the boy Freddy had died of the accident that happened to him; was sorry that he had not died instantly; said it would be easier for the child to die than for her to give him up; on Sunday, the 18th, in speaking about a new tent the Doctor had put up at the beach at Marblehead, defendant said she supposed it was very nice, but that Mrs. Jenness was seeing her last happy days; she would put an end to all the Doctor's happiness this fall, although Mrs. Jenness little thought so, and would have done it before but for the Doctor's mother and Freddy; said she was nobody's child, and would go far away, never to be heard from; she looked upon Mr. and Mrs. Jenness' house as her own home and they her parents; Freddy had been taught to call her (defendant) "Sister Weda;" she was willing to live and die for them, but now she had lost all confidence in everybody, and soon she (witness) would know all of her long dark story. Witness further testified:—On Sunday when Miss Miner was in the house making the pies she said she wished to make one apple pie for herself and one for the Doctor, as he liked them; when I went into the cook room she had cut up a large quantity of apple, more than enough to make two pies; Miss Miner and Miss Stevens went up stairs subsequent to this, and when I went up Miss Miner left the room and went down stairs; was gone half an hour; afterwards she said that she had eaten one of the pies, and it was good if she did make it; she told Miss Stevens to be sure and retain one of the pies for the Doctor; asked me if I would not eat some, and as I declined she wished to know if I would not eat a piece in the morning; also asked Mr. Johnson, one of the hired men, to partake, which he did; she left the house and came back the Tuesday morning following, and asked me how we had all been; she said she had come on two errands, one was to get a note which she had spoken to me about prior to this, and wished me to be sure and tell the Doctor to carry it down, he was so apt to forget; the other errand was that she wished to see Mrs. Whiteside about the pies; she also said that she did not like carraway in pies; afterwards Mrs. Whiteside came back, and Louisa went over to see her; returned and said that Mrs. Whiteside's sister was sick and looked quite badly; she afterwards came into the kitchen and told me to be sure and remind the Doctor about the note; while she was at Whiteside's the Doctor came; something was said about Miss Miner to him, and he immediately left and went down town; the Doctor never made any improper proposals to her (Miss Miner), although she had heard slanderous reports concerning the Doctor, but after she had been in the house she had no suspicion of him.

On the cross-examination of witness no new facts were elicited.

Albert G. Johnson, who had been acquainted with the Doctor for fifteen weeks and who had been doctored by him, and did chores in the house, testified to seeing Miss Miner go out with a pan and return with it full of apples; after Miss Miner had made the pies and had gone out Miss Stevens said that she would not have the Doctor eat one of the pies for the world, as Louisa might put some poison in them; I smiled at the idea; while Miss Miner was paring the apples she told me that green apple pie was the Doctor's favorite; while Louisa was making the pies Miss Stevens and Miss Swett came out; Miss Stevens watched Louisa in making them, but afterwards went out and she was left alone; when the pies were made Louisa said she offered a piece to Miss Stevens, but she would not touch it; would have given me a piece had it not been too hot and I might not have liked it; at supper Miss Miner's pies not being on the table she went out and procured one and opened it to them; I ate a piece, but the others refused to touch it; after supper she came out into the kitchen and bade me and Miss Stevens good night; I heard her give directions that one of her pies should be kept for Dr. Jenness, and the other two be sent to the family; I never heard her use threats towards the Doctor; I do not know as the Doctor knew where the pies were; I was not at the house when the Marshal took the pies away; prior to making the pies I had heard that Miss Miner had used threats towards the Doctor.

On the cross-examination witness said he could not tell whether Miss Miner put any poison into the pies or not, but his piece of pie did not taste exactly right, and he did not relish it; Miss Miner took a piece and ate it; after Miss Lenfest arrived Louisa acted cold towards the family, and particularly after the family had interfered with her in making the pies.

DR. HAYES' ARCTIC EXPEDITION.

Progress of the Panther—Her Arrival at Julianshaab—A Ball in Her Honor—A Remarkable Glacier—Minerals in Greenland—Future Movements of the Expedition.

IVIGTUT, SOUTH GREENLAND, July 27, 1869.

We arrived here yesterday, and as there is a vessel nearly ready to sail for Philadelphia I take advantage of the opportunity and send you an account of our proceedings up to the present time.

On the 3d inst. we sailed from St. Johns, Newfoundland, at noon, and steered to the northward, keeping close in shore. Between five and six o'clock P. M. passed between Bacalou Island and Breakheart Point—the south point of Trinity Bay—and took our final departure from Cape Bonavista at eight o'clock. Nothing of especial importance occurred for the next few days as we worked slowly along towards Greenland. Slowly, I say, for the Panther is by no means a clipper, and being very deep, with over 500 tons of coal aboard, she did not average more than seven knots an hour. We had expected that Disko would be our first stopping place, but experiencing much stormy weather, with a heavy head and cross sea, against which but little progress could be made, a visit to Julianshaab was determined on, and at noon of the 8th we steered more to the eastward. Saturday, the 10th, at noon, Cape Desolation (lat. 60 45, lon. 47 57) was in sight to the northward of us, and we expected to be at our destined port the next morning; but the weather set in thick and foggy, so that when land was made on Sunday morning it was uncertain what part of the coast it might be. A boat was sent out towards the land exploring, but after an absence of two hours, during which it had been beating about in the fog, returned without having seen any signs of inhabitants. Being unpleasantly near to breakers we concluded to look for a harbor and wait for fine weather, and, as the fog lifted a little towards noon, the boat was sent ahead to look out for sunken rocks, while we steamed cautiously along in her wake, finally mooring in a partially sheltered bay, with one anchor down and lines made fast ashore. Subsequent observations placed this anchorage about ten miles southeast of Cape Desolation.

Here we lay until Tuesday, when the anchor commenced dragging, and we steamed away to a better harbor, that had been discovered a couple of miles to the westward. When the anchor came up it was minus the stock, which had broken off and disappeared. We lay at this last anchorage until Thursday, the 15th, before the weather cleared so that it was safe to go to sea. At noon of that day we started (losing the stock of the other anchor while unmooring), and arrived at Julianshaab, in latitude 60 25, longitude 45 55, about two A. M. Friday, under the pilotage of three Esquimaux, whom we found cruising off shore in their kyacks, looking out for seals and other game.

Danish settlements and Esquimaux villages have been so frequently described of late years that I do not deem it necessary to inflict on you a detailed account of this one, as they all have the same half civilized, half dilapidated air, combined with a variety of "flagrantly odious" smells, which would rival those in the far-famed city of Cologne. In the evening a ball in honor of our arrival was given in the carpenter's shop, and was largely attended by the beauty, fashion and rank of the place, who so densely crowded the room that the odors in and from it became very rank indeed, almost enough so to "smell to heaven." This was so unpleasant that few of our party could bear it more than a few minutes at a time, but with the assistance of the Panther's crew, who were less fastidious, the fun grew "fast and furious," and was maintained until long after dawn, for we are so near the Arctic circle that there is twilight in the sky all night and ordinary print can easily be read at midnight. The ladies here wear no crinoline and their dress so nearly resembles that of the men that the uninitiated cannot readily distinguish the sexes apart, which at first led to some laughable mistakes in the choice of partners; but, generally speaking,

All went merry as a marriage bell, the ladies acquitting themselves well, especially in the waltz, schottische and polka, having perfected themselves in these accomplishments under the tuition of the Danes.

Dr. Hayes here found an old acquaintance in the person of Mr. Anton, the pastor, who was formerly stationed at Upernavik, and under his direction a party visited Kakortok, about fifteen miles northeast from here, where there are some ancient ruins, supposed to be relics of the Northmen who were colonized there in the ninth and tenth centuries. The principal ruin—that of a cathedral—is sixty feet long by forty in breadth, with walls four feet thick, which in some places are yet from fifteen to twenty feet high, remarkably firm and in good preservation. Some excellent photographic views were taken, and the party returned highly gratified with their excursion, the only drawbacks to perfect satisfaction being the flies and mosquitoes, which were both intolerable and interminable—the latter not only larger but more venomous than those generally seen at home.

Having taken many views of the settlement and the scenery in its vicinity, we sailed from Julianshaab on Monday, the 19th, under the pilotage of a very intelligent half-breed, who is Governor or superintendent of Kaksimint, a station about thirty miles to the westward, where we shall make a brief stay in order to visit a remarkable glacier not far from it. We reached Kaksimint early Tuesday morning, having picked up by the way an oomiak, or woman's boat, containing part of our pilot's family, who were going to meet him at Julianshaab. Although this boat had ten persons aboard, they comprise only a fraction of the old man's family, he having twenty-two children of his own, the youngest but six months old, six adopted children and ten or twelve grandchildren. His wife is also a half-breed, and some of their daughters are quite pretty, having blue eyes and brown hair, while the rosy flush on their cheeks and their regular features indicated a semi-European origin. The old man gave us a ball in the evening, which was a grand affair, and our party having either overcome their repugnance to dancing with partners who might possibly be of their own sex, or else attracted by the Governor's comparatively pretty girls, entered into the spirit of it and enjoyed themselves "hugely."

We left Kaksimint at three o'clock P. M. Tuesday, and after following a devious course among the islands for ten or twelve miles, came to the fiord leading to Sermitsialik, at which place is the glacier we purposed visiting. While steaming up the fiord it was noticed that the water gradually changed in color to a creamy white, a circumstance that gave rise to many possible conjectures; but the most plausible one (subsequently found to be correct) was, that the glacier in its progress passes over and absorbs large quantities of clayey matter, discharging it again when the ice is melted by the summer heat.

We reached the glacier at seven P. M., and after sailing along its face, from one side of the fiord to the other, anchored at its southeastern extremity, about 300 yards from it and 100 from the shore. Early the next morning every one was busy, parties being ashore in all directions photographing, sketching and hunting, while Dr. Hayes and Captain Bartlett walked about three miles inland along the edge of the glacier and finally crossed it from one side to the other. The sea front of this glacier is more than one and a half miles in extent, its centre projecting out into the bay at an angle of about 145 degrees. This is caused by the centre moving faster than the sides, where the motion is retarded by its pressure against the uneven sides and angles of the rocks that resist its course. From the water's edge it presents a nearly perpendicular wall, varying from 125 to 200 feet in height, marked with countless irregularities of weird and fantastic form, affording to one's fancy a scope for imagining a thousand things most wonderful and strange. The upper surface, instead of being smooth or with a few irregularities of surface, like most other glaciers, is broken into innumerable peaks with deep, narrow crevasses between them, across many of which a man could stand astride and see below him a wedge shaped chasm a hundred feet or more in depth. A fall into one of these would certainly prove fatal, for if the victim should not be killed outright he would be so jammed into the narrowing crevasse at or near the bottom that death would ensue from freezing before means could be procured to extricate him. Many of these crevasses or cracks reached from the top of the glacier down to and below the water's edge and extended farther into the body of it than the eyes could penetrate.

The sun shone out with great force in the afternoon, and his power was soon made visible on the glacier, first by the numerous waterfalls that came pouring down from its summit, while later in the day huge masses of ice, some of them hundreds of tons in weight, broke off and tumbled into the water with an almost deafening uproar, sending sheets of spray and foam high into the air, and sometimes raising a swell that almost tore the ship from her moorings. It not being safe to remain at our anchorage any longer all hands were called aboard and we steamed across to the other side of the fiord, coming to in a safer harbor half a mile away from the glacier. The instruments were again taken ashore, and while we were engaged in taking views of the ship, surrounded by native boats, we were favored with a display seldom witnessed by visitors to Greenland, namely, the discharge of a large iceberg from the glacier, a process styled "calving" by the Danes.

At first we heard the premonitory growl generally given by the glacier previous to a heavy discharge, and all eyes were immediately turned towards it, but, strange to say, no disruption appeared to be in progress. One of the highest peaks, about 500 feet back from the water, had disappeared, however, and we concluded that its falling into one of the deep crevasses made the noise just heard; but we scarcely had time to comment upon the circumstance when we heard another roar like a thousand long-continued, distant thunders, seeming to come, like a deep groan, from the heart of the glacier in its agony of travail. In a few seconds the water came boiling up from the bottom in front of the glacier, like a mighty chaldron, into which great masses of ice began to fall, which, as they plunged, sank and rose again, whirling around, one after the other, in erratic motion, gave increased power to the illusion that they were in the midst of a seething pot. Meanwhile the roaring continued, and in a few seconds more a section of the glacier's front, about 300 yards in extent and half that distance in depth, was in motion, swaying backwards and forwards with a gentle motion at first, and then, with an increased thundering, plunged bodily into the sea. The whole mass was at once submerged, but soon reappeared, rushing up until its summit was at least 200 feet above the water's edge, while from its rugged sides were pouring a thousand cascades and streams, which, combined with the waving motion of the mass, gave it the appearance of some mighty sea monster shaking his shaggy head in sport.

The swell caused by this avalanche was tremendous, seriously endangering the ship, though she was a mile away from it, and breaking completely over rocks from twenty to thirty feet high. It was more than an hour before this detached berg settled down into anything like quietness, being then about 100 feet high. But this did not last long; for from some unknown cause it broke into three large fragments, which floated away, with their highest peaks from fifty to seventy-five feet high, while the whole surface of the fiord was covered with innumerable fragments, of all shapes and sizes, from a few pounds to a few hundred tons in weight. We suppose that the fall of the high pinnacle referred to (which may have been a thousand tons or more in weight) gave a shock that split off this huge mass, the disruption of which we viewed from an elevated position, and though imperfectly described here it was a scene to be impressed on our memories and will not soon be forgotten.

Friday, July 23, the last day of our stay, was devoted to climbing the glacier. At ten A. M. we left the vessel, having forty persons in our party, a mingled assemblage of whites and Esquimaux, each one carrying something, either of provisions, camp equipments, photographic or scientific instruments. Ascending the hill and skirting along the edge of the glacier about a mile we commenced the ascent, glad enough to get away from the flies and mosquitoes, which had been most persistently tormenting in their attentions. The road was rugged and difficult at first, but after gaining an altitude of 200 feet the walking became easier and we kept on our way along the crests of the ridges with deep crevasses yawning on either side for two miles, to an elevation of about 1,000 feet, from which there was a good view in all directions. Here the tent was pitched and all hands were soon variously employed, the photographers taking views, Dr. Hayes, with several assistants, measuring angles to complete his survey of the fiord and glacier; Mr. Bradford and his pupil making sketches, while the remainder were engaged about the camp fire in preparations for dinner.

From our position, which overlooked the highest land in the vicinity, the glacier sloped away inland about a mile and then commenced rising again without any of the sharp peaks and crevasses that prevailed near us, stretching away thence to the great Mer de Glace, which occupies the centre of Greenland from Cape Farewell, in the south, to Cape Constitution, in the north, a vast, unbroken sea of ice more than 1,200 miles long and of uncertain breadth. We suppose that its disruptured surface here is caused by broken and uneven ground, possibly islands, over which it has forced its way.

At two P. M. all of the scientific and other labors were completed, and after doing justice to the dinner, which was plentiful for the whole party (though our Esquimaux assistants did not leave it until the last bone was picked), we retraced our steps to the vessel and started for Kaksimint again, arriving at that place early enough to attend another soirée at the Governor's mansion.

The next stage in our journey was from Kaksimint to this place, Ivigtut, latitude 61 12, longitude 48 05, where we purpose stopping a couple of days to inspect a mine of cryolithe, or, as it is sometimes called, native soda-ash, mingled with different minerals. This is said to be the only mine of the kind known in the world at the present time, and was discovered in the following manner:—Among other civilized manners and customs acquired by the Esquimaux from their intercourse with Europeans is an immoderate fondness for tobacco in all its various forms, the gentler sex having a special affinity to snuff, but owing to high prices or a scarcity of this commodity they were wont to mix it with a white powder, procured by pulverizing a species of rock. This attracted the notice of the Danes on account of the mineral traces appearing in it, and about ten years since samples were sent to Denmark for analysis. It was there discovered that this rock was an almost pure soda ash, resembling fine porcelain in its general character, and containing in large deposits the sulphurets of copper and iron, with lead ore in great purity, the latter yielding five per cent of pure silver. A company was formed to work the mine, and operations commenced, principal attention being at first given to breaking up the cryolithe and separating from it the various metals. At length two vessels were loaded exclusively with ore and despatched for Denmark; but both of them were lost. This misfortune, combined with other untoward events, led the lessees of the mine to abandon their charter. The present company was then formed, being guaranteed for twenty-five years the privilege of working all or any mines that may be discovered in Greenland, the Danish government claiming a royalty of twenty-five per cent. They have now worked this mine successfully for five years, furnishing the cryolithe as it comes from the mine, without separating any of the mineral from it, for $13 in gold per gross ton. At present nearly all of it goes to Denmark and the United States, the freight on it being nine dollars in gold per ton. Attempts have been made to manufacture it into various kinds of ware, but it was found too brittle to stand the heat, and it is now used principally to make soda ash—one ton of the cryolithe, in conjunction with other ingredients, furnishing four tons of ash. One company in Philadelphia consume annually about 7,000 tons. It is a very heavy substance, but brittle, being easily broken. Color a pure white, very much resembling alum in its general appearance. The development of mineral wealth is but just commencing in Greenland, which, away from the scattered settlements along the seaboard, is imperfectly known, though it offers a rare field for the researches of geologists and naturalists. I have to-day been shown some very fine specimens of lead ore, that were picked up on an island near here, and it is said that a vessel might be loaded by merely picking up the pieces lying in the crevasses and on the rocks, without the preliminary labor of blasting.

From this place, which we shall probably leave to-morrow, the route of the Panther will be north, to Melville Bay, stopping by the way at Disco and Upernavik; returning to St. John's via Labrador about the 1st of October.

THE VANDERBILT STATUE.

NEW YORK, September 4, 1869.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

I feel thoroughly grateful for the generous and appreciative notice of the "Vanderbilt Statue, &c.," that appeared in your columns of yesterday, but there is an intimation in its concluding paragraph that, in justice to the gentleman whom his friends and myself sought to honor by the work, I must ask you to correct. The idea originated with me, and through very liberal assistance I was enabled to carry it into effect. I was determined to keep my secret faithfully, and succeeded, and I know that Commodore Vanderbilt was thoroughly ignorant, until quite recently, of what has occupied the uninterrupted labors, for over two years past, of

ALBERT DE GROOT.

THE COURTS.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Motions in Bankruptcy.

Before Judge Blatchford.

A number of motions in bankruptcy were disposed of by Judge Blatchford yesterday. In the case of the New Haven Steamboat Company against the New Haven Transportation Company a motion was made to postpone it, in order that all the facts in relation to the alleged bankruptcy might be fully ascertained, and also to discover what the shareholders had to say in the matter. The application was resisted, on the ground that the shareholders had nothing to do with it.

The Court denied the motion, and ordered that an answer be filed, whereupon Mr. Donohoe filed the answer, which denied the allegations contained in the petition, which alleged that the defendants had become amenable to the Bankrupt law.

Mr. Donohoe then demanded a jury trial.

Judge Blatchford granted the application setting the case down for the next jury term of the court.

A Novel Hotel Case.

Baxter vs. Steamboat Hendrik Hudson.—This was a motion to set aside a sale and all the proceedings in the matter, on the ground of irregularity. The libel claimed salvage service in pumping out the steamboat Hendrik Hudson. The papers showed, however, that it was nothing more than a dismantled hull used as a hotel at Polypus Island, which is situated about fifty miles up the Hudson river. The services of the claimant had been brought into requisition in order to pump the water out of the hull when removing it to a more convenient portion of the island, where it was used as a marine residence, instead of a steamboat, as alleged.

Judge Blatchford, in setting aside the proceedings, observed that one might as well call a canal boat placed on the tow path for the shelter of horses a regular canal boat carrying merchandise as call the Hendrick Hudson a steamboat. The proceedings were accordingly set aside.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS' COURT.

Counterfeit Case.

Before Commissioner Shields.

The United States vs. Phillip Becker.—The defendant was arrested on the charge of passing twenty dollar counterfeit bills. The testimony of Frederick Schmecke, residing at 200 Rivington street, set forth that a bill had been passed upon him; that he kept it a night and returned it to the defendant, who said he got it from his boss. Henry Koch corroborated the above statement.

Jacob Freedon testified that he asked the defendant if he gave Schmecke that twenty dollar bill and if he did not know it was bad? He replied in the affirmative, but his boss, Mr. Becker, gave it to him and handed him a dollar and a glass of lager to pass it. He said he had given the change to his boss.

The prisoner was held to await the action of the Grand Jury. The "boss" was subsequently arrested and held under $5,000 bail to appear on Wednesday.

Assistant District Attorney Purdy appeared for the government, and Mr. R. S. Jerome for the defendant.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS.

Custody of a Child—Habeas Corpus.

Before Judge Clerke.

In the Matter of Florence Henderson.—This was a habeas corpus proceeding for a colored girl. The claimant, a Mr. Fortes, was also colored, and alleged that some years ago he married the grandmother of the girl. At that time the grandmother had two children and the claimant had to provide for the family. The mother of the child subsequently married a seafaring man, and as Henderson was absent most of the time at sea the care of the family still fell on him. The father is since dead. When the grandmother died the present possessor of the child, who was called in to attend her, was allowed to take the child, and now refuses to give her up. Both the claimants insist that the grandmother confided the child to them. Mr. Fortes further claimed that he was in good pecuniary circumstances, while the respondent's circumstances were those of a laboring woman dependent on her daily labor.

Judge Clerke decided that as neither party were related in blood to leave it to the child, and the child agreed to stay with the respondent.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Opening of the Term—Discharge of the Grand Jury—A Large Number of Prisoners Plead Guilty to Larceny and are Sent to the State Prison.

Before Judge Bedford.

The September term of this court commenced its session yesterday, his Honor City Judge Bedford presiding. District Attorney Garvin appeared for the people.

The first business in order was the calling of the Grand Jury panel by the clerk, after which Judge Bedford said that the grand jurors who answered to their names were discharged, he having been informed by the District Attorney that the Oyer and Terminer Grand Jury were now in session, and the statute would not allow more than one grand jury to be in session at a time.

The petty jury panel was then called, when only twenty citizens out of 150 obeyed the summons of the Court. The City Judge stated that he would only receive legal excuses from these gentlemen. The Judge and District Attorney came into court prepared to try a large calendar of cases, but they could not dispose of as many of them as might have been tried had there been a full panel of jurors. The failure of citizens to co-operate with the ministers of justice in the prosecution of criminals has occasioned scurrilous attacks upon the General Sessions in an obscure penny sheet. It will be impossible for the prosecuting officers to efficiently discharge their duties unless the petty jurors render their indispensable aid.

John Murphy pleaded guilty to larceny from the person, having on the 22d of August stolen a silver watch and gold chain, valued at eighty dollars, the property of James Heaning. He was sent to the State Prison for three years and six months.

Charles Lewis, who on the 7th of August stole a silver watch and clothing valued at eighty-one dollars from Henry Keiser, pleaded guilty, and was sent to the Sing Sing Prison for two years.

Stephen Carroll pleaded guilty to stealing a watch and chain worth seventy-five dollars from William B. Dunley, No. 230 East Eleventh street, on the 12th of August. Judge Bedford said that the prisoner bore a bad reputation. The sentence was imprisonment in the State Prison for four years.

George R. Newman was charged with stealing a leather bag containing clothing valued at fifty dollars from the Metropolitan Hotel on the 31st of July. The bag was owned by Sullivan D. Ames. The prisoner said he was a musician and had just arrived from Frederick City, Md., when charged with the larceny. He was sent to the State Prison for two years.

Joseph Greenwood and George Tresser pleaded guilty to an indictment charging them with stealing from Seligman & Strouse, on the 18th of August, a quantity of shirts, valued at $124. They were each sent to the State Prison for one year, satisfactory evidence having been furnished the Judge of their previous good character.

Elvira Byark pleaded guilty to an attempt at grand larceny, the charge being that on the 14th of August she stole forty-seven dollars in money from Mena Brink. She was sent to the Penitentiary for one year.

William King (colored) was charged with stealing, on the 25th of August, watches, jewelry and clothing the aggregate value of which amounted to $250, the property of Willis B. Whitaker. Judge Bedford, in passing sentence, observed that the accused perpetrated another larceny. He accordingly imposed a severe sentence—viz., four years' imprisonment in the State Prison.

Augusta Miller, who, on the 20th of August, stole $121 from Mary Armstrong, pleaded guilty to an attempt at grand larceny. As there were extenuating circumstances his Honor modified the sentence to imprisonment in the Penitentiary for one year.

John Smith, who was charged with stealing some clothing from John Schofield, pleaded guilty to petty larceny. The complainant interceded in his behalf, and the Judge sent him to the Penitentiary for three months.

Daniel D. Bates and George W. Farley pleaded guilty to stealing seven dollars in money from Andrew Van Antwerp on the 19th of August. Evidence was furnished to the Court establishing the good character of Bates, which led the City Judge to suspend judgment. The record of the other boy was not so clean, and his Honor sent him to the Penitentiary for six months.

Michael Buckley pleaded guilty to an attempt at grand larceny, having on the 20th of August stolen a bronze ornament and a mirror, the property of Bramwell & Willis. The prisoner was remanded for sentence.

Catharine Devine pleaded guilty to petty larceny from the person, in stealing twenty-one dollars in United States Treasury notes from Augusta Neuschultz, 139 Forsyth street. It appeared that she had six children and a sick husband. Judge Bedford remarked that as an individual he sympathized with the prisoner; but as the larceny was clearly proved, he was compelled to send her to the Penitentiary for six months.

Margaret Tucker, who was caught in the act of stealing a pocketbook containing twenty-one dollars from George Taylor, on the 23d of August, pleaded guilty to the charge. The City Judge questioned her, when she frankly admitted that she had only been out of the State Prison about two weeks. His Honor said that he would send her back to stay two years and six months.

Thomas W. Johnson and Wm. Quinn pleaded guilty to burglary in the third degree. On the night of the 19th of August they effected an entrance to the distillery of Wm. E. Balch, 129 Greenwich street, and stole four dollars in money. Johnson (who has served a term in the Penitentiary) was sent to the State Prison for two years and six months and his associate was sentenced to one year's imprisonment in the Penitentiary.

The above large number of prisoners having been disposed of by the District Attorney and the Judge, the prosecuting officer suggested that an additional panel of jurors ought to be summoned and made returnable on Wednesday. The order was made, after which the court adjourned till this morning.

The following is the calendar for to-day:—The People vs. Charles Miller, grand larceny; Same vs. Gabriel Brok, do.; Same vs. William Tims, do.; Same vs. Maximilian Weil, do.; Same vs. Charles King, grand larceny from the person; Same vs. William Raulbrau, larceny from the person; Same vs. Robert Meckelham, forgery; Same vs. John Donnelly, mayhem; Same vs. James Burns, burglary; Same vs. Edward Quinn and William Robinson, do.; Same vs. Annie Workin, grand larceny; Same vs. Francis Heinrich, do.; Same vs. Sarah Thompson, do.; Same vs. Mary Shannon, do.; Same vs. Frederick Peters, do.; Same vs. John Shaffer, do.; Same vs. Matthias Trimber and William Munch, do.; Same vs. William Rafferty, do.; Same vs. John Rush, do.; Same vs. Charles Letter, do.; same vs. James, do.; Same vs. Michael Murphy, do.; Same vs. Thomas Burke, do.; Same vs. Julius Wenck and Charles Schultz, do.; Same vs. Samuel Kaufman, do.; Same vs. John Roberts and James Morton, do.; Same vs. Thomas W. Russell, do.; Same vs. Charles Start and Christian Start, receiving stolen goods; Same vs. Louis Moglia, do.; Same vs. Charles W. Flood, do.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

THE WEATHER YESTERDAY.—The following record will show the changes in the temperature for the past twenty-four hours in comparison with the corresponding day of last year, as indicated by the thermometer at Hudnut's pharmacy, HERALD Building, Broadway, corner of Ann street:—

SUPPOSED FATAL ACCIDENT.—A child of T. Wood, of No. 513 Sixth avenue, last night fell from the third floor to the ground, breaking an arm and sustaining internal injuries from which, it is believed, it cannot recover.

SUDDEN DEATHS.—Thomas O'Connor died suddenly yesterday at 165th street and Tenth avenue.

Mrs. Sullivan expired very suddenly, on Sunday evening, at her residence, 109 Mott street. Deceased was thirty-five years of age.

Sunday evening Sarah Curran died suddenly at No. 485 West Seventeenth street. Coroner Schirmer was notified to hold inquests on the bodies.

MEETING OF TAMMANY SOCIETY.—The Tammany Society, Columbian Order, met last evening at their rooms, Tammany Hall. Scribe Wilson Small, in the absence of Grand Sachem W. M. Tweed, occupied the chair. The attendance was large, but no business was transacted, and after a short session the society adjourned to meet the first Monday in October, at sundown.

A DANGEROUS STRUCTURE.—Roundsman Pickett, of the Eighth police precinct, reported yesterday that the two story and attic house No. 71 Thompson street is in a very dangerous condition, the chimney having fallen through to the basement at an early hour in the morning, and the whole structure being in a dangerous condition and likely to topple over at any moment. The tenants have moved out, it being unsafe for them to remain.

PAYMENT OF PENSIONS.—The payment of pensions to disabled soldiers, and the wives and children of those who died in the war, was continued yesterday at the Sub-Treasury. There was not the same rush, accompanied by bustle and excitement, which took place on Saturday, but still some two or three hundred applicants received their awards. Great care is taken in admitting the claims of widows, and some were refused their money because they were guilty of matrimony subsequent to their widowhood.

THE LAFAYETTE ANNIVERSARY.—The anniversary of the birth of the Marquis de Lafayette, the friend of American liberty, occurred yesterday, and was duly celebrated by the Fifty-fifth regiment N. G. S. N. Y., better known as the Lafayette Garde. They started from the foot of Eighth street, East river, in a steamer, for the East River Park, Eighty-fourth street. There they paraded in full dress and afterwards contended in target shooting for a prize offered by the commandant, Colonel Allen. A grand ball took place in the evening.

THE NEW POST OFFICE.—A large quantity of concrete for the foundation of the Post Office has arrived. The masons will, in all probability, begin work to-day at the southwest corner, opposite the Astor House. The speculator who purchased the Park fence for advertising purposes will make handsomely by the affair. The whole space has been divided into sections and the price charged for the use of ten lineal feet for a day is four dollars. A well known advertiser has already taken advantage of the novelty and has covered almost the whole fence with posters.

DEATHS FROM INJURIES.—Coroner Schirmer was yesterday called to hold an inquest at the Morgue on the body of Frank Hubbard, an American, thirty-four years of age, whose death was the result of injuries received by falling from a wall corner of 100th street and Third avenue. Deceased's skull was fractured by the fall.

The same Coroner was notified that Michael Conway had died in Bellevue Hospital from a compound fracture of the leg and other injuries received in some manner not stated. Deceased was taken to the hospital by officer Corson, of the Seventeenth precinct, in an ambulance.

BOARD OF POLICE.—No session of this body was held yesterday owing to the absence of Commissioner Smith. The other Commissioners remained in the building until a late hour indulging the hope that he would arrive and enable them to take into consideration the rescinding of the order relative to uniform that has created such disorganization and demoralization in the force. The order is already virtually dead, inasmuch as the Commissioners granted permission to nearly all officers who apply to wear citizens' clothing when off their regular hour of duty. Many of the officers and men are so spirited that they submit to all manner of inconveniences rather than ask permission to violate an order. Others are in the habit of "attending public worship" every night that they are off duty, as on such occasions the order does not apply.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

AN ALLEGED CONFIDENCE MAN ARRESTED.—A man who gave the name of Henry Fust, was yesterday evening arrested by officer Gunson, of the Broadway squad, and locked up at the Central Police Office, on the complaint of a female who charges that he has endeavored to obtain money from her by representing himself as a captain of the police.

A COOL ROBBERY.—Timothy Crotty, of No. 316 Seventh avenue, appeared before Justice Dodge at the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday and charged Peter Kehoe, a prisoner in charge of the officers, with being one of a gang who robbed him in a liquor saloon on Sixth avenue, last Tuesday evening, of eighty-two dollars in money and a watch of the value of thirty dollars. The prisoner was committed in default of bail.

BURGLARY IN GRAND STREET.—Mr. James Courtney, of No. 50 Grand street, appeared before Justice Dodge at the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday and charged Charles Coolie, a negro, with breaking into his premises on Sunday night and attempting to steal a quantity of dry goods of the value of $200. It appeared from the evidence of the officer who arrested him that he was taken in the act, and he was consequently committed to answer.

BOND ROBBERY.—Mrs. Margaret P. Houghton, No. 76 Amity street, appeared before Justice Dodge at the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday and charged a man named James W. Heaton, a prisoner in charge of the officers, with robbing her of two $1,000 and one $100 United States bond. The complainant is a widow and the prisoner was in her employ. The robbery was committed while she was absent. The prisoner confessed, Mrs. Houghton alleges, having taken the bonds and disposed of them. He was committed in default of $3,000 bail.

ROSH-HASHONO.

The Jewish Festival—General Observance of the Day by the Hebrews—Suspension of Business—Religious Services at all the Synagogues.

In the HERALD of Sunday last reference was had to Rosh-Hashono, the Jewish New Year, which began on Sunday evening, that being the commencement of the first day of Tishri, the seventh month of the year, counting from the month of Nisan, the first month of the Jewish civic year. Among the Hebrews of every shade of religious opinion this festive day is held in the highest esteem. The orthodox—he who adheres rigidly to the historical traditions of the Pentateuch and to the ritualistic code of the Talmud—are hardly more unanimous in their observance of the day as a high religious feast than are those classed either as moderate reformers, liberals or radicals. In fact, all of them, whether professing the creed of Moses in its most ancient forms, whether under the most liberalized rites of the Portuguese school, or whether adopting the modern, advanced view of idealistic Judaism, all unite in celebrating the day Rosh-Hashono.

Hence it was observable yesterday that all places of business owned by men of the Hebrew faith were either entirely closed or abandoned by their owners for the day, thus giving up all secular employment and devoting the time to religious duties. All the synagogues in the various parts of the city, from the plain and unassuming small and dark "schools" in Henry street to the palatial and gorgeous "temples" on Fifth avenue. Moreover, a large number of halls had been fitted up especially for religious services during this festive season, as Pythagoras Hall, on Canal street; the Casino, on East Houston street; the German Odd Fellows Hall, on Grand street; the Henry Jones Lodge Room, on East Thirteenth street; the National Assembly Rooms, on West Forty-fourth street; Brevoort Hall, on East Fifty-fourth street, and a large number of other localities throughout the city, which, at other times and seasons, are used by gay pleasure seekers for merry enjoyment.

The day being one of special sanctity, all the Jews follow the command of the Talmud and abstain from all work. Those who follow the reformed creed will return to their secular employment to-day. The orthodox, however, adhere to the rule of old and continue to abstain from work for two days, and with these latter the full observance of Rosh-Hashono will end only this evening with sunset, to be resumed on the ninth day of Tishri, or the 14th day of September, again at sunset, as the last day of the festival of the religious new year. The numerical designation of the current year in the Mosaic almanac is now 5630 Anno Mundi, or since the creation of the world.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

Board of Aldermen.

The Board met yesterday afternoon at two o'clock, with the President, Alderman Coman, in the chair. A number of the ordinary resolutions for grading, &c., were presented and referred to the appropriate committees.

The Street Commissioner was directed to remove the booths on the east side of Union Market.

The resignation of William B. White, as Alderman of the Seventh district, was received and laid on the table.

Alderman Coman then presented the following preamble and resolutions:—

Whereas the great achievements of individuals, which by their novelty or the exhibition of unusual daring and courage in their accomplishment reflect credit and renown upon entire communities, should be recognized and acknowledged by those in authority, as well in commendation of the acts performed and actors directly concerned as to excite in others a spirit of emulation; and

Whereas New York being pre-eminently a maritime city, it is peculiarly the duty of its municipal authorities to commend and applaud the acts of any of its citizens that tend in a marked manner to inspire its people with a partiality for aquatic sports and pastimes, thereby encouraging the young and adventurous of our population to acquire a practical knowledge of the science of navigation, and a love for the excitement and perils inseparably connected with the existence of all those who "go down unto the sea in ships"—knowledge certain to result advantageously to the best and chief interests of this city, and which, if pursued with avidity by our young and most prominent citizens, is equally certain to result in securing for our people a reputation for skilful daring and successful enterprise on the sea, second to none other in the world; and

Whereas the achievements of our public spirited fellow citizen, James Gordon Bennett, Jr., Esq., in his yachts, the Henrietta and Dauntless, winning the celebrated ocean yacht race with the former, and with the latter making one of the quickest passages across the Atlantic ever made by a sailing vessel, reflects great renown upon this, his native city; and as patriotism and generosity are invariably characteristics that accompany courage and daring, and recall in this connection the patriotic tender of the yacht Henrietta by Mr. Bennett to the government of the United States at a time when the services of such a vessel were of peculiar value, and as such acts of generosity, coupled with such chivalrous and persistent efforts to win fame, not only for our city, but for the whole country, on the part of one of our own citizens, comparatively so young yet so enterprising and successful as Mr. Bennett, is deserving of and should receive the encouragement and commendation of the civic authorities of this municipality; be it therefore

Resolved, That the Common Council, the direct representatives of the people of this city, for themselves and on behalf of those they represent, hereby tender their congratulations to James Gordon Bennet, Jr., Esq., on the success that has attended his efforts to secure for himself and his associates in the New York Yacht Club a foremost place among the yachtmen of the world; efforts that reflect credit directly upon this, his native city, and that typify so closely the lofty aspirations of the young American sailor; and we ask to assure him that in any subsequent enterprise of a like character in which he may engage, he will have the individual sympathy, the hearty good will and active countenance and co-operation of our people and government for its successful and triumphant termination; and be it further

Resolved, That a special committee of four members of each branch of the Common Council, including the presidents of the respective boards, be appointed to have the foregoing preamble and resolution suitably engrossed, duly authenticated and presented to Mr. Bennett, on behalf of the city of New York, upon his arrival from England.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted, and Aldermen Cushman, Repper and McGrath, with the President (Alderman Coman), were appointed as the special committee.

A communication was received from the Counsel to the Corporation in regard to taxation of commercial travellers in other States. He gave it as his opinion that the municipal taxations were such as States had no right to enforce when they imposed burdens heavier than those imposed for citizens of the States in which the regulations exist.

The Board adjourned to Monday next at two o'clock P. M.

Board of Assistant Aldermen.

There was no meeting of this Board yesterday afternoon. The assistant clerk called the roll, and only three members answering to their names he declared the Board adjourned till Thursday next at two o'clock P. M.

PUBLIC EDUCATION.

Opening of the Schools—Changes in the System.

The familiar sight of numbers of children wending their way to school greeted the eyes of people yesterday morning. It was, indeed, a happy, cheering spectacle to see them coming and going in all directions, and none of them, apparently, trudging "unwillingly to school." There were greetings and welcomings between teachers and pupils, and the rolls show a very good muster. There was, of course, not very much done in the classes except reading, writing and preparing the lessons for to-day. The renovations and improvements in the buildings and rooms were duly criticised and commented on, notes of how the vacation was spent were compared during recess hour, and many tales of pleasures and adventures participated in were told by the young heroes and heroines.

The schools throughout the city opened with what certainly seemed to be cheering auspices, and the grand system of public education will be continued through the season, no doubt, with its usual success. The changes contemplated in the system have already been referred to in the columns of the HERALD, and are such as will undoubtedly add to its efficiency. The subject of dividing the city into districts and appointing a general superintendent to each is held in abeyance. The project does not meet with much favor from the City Superintendent and his present assistants, for the reason, perhaps, that they imagine such an arrangement would imply a doubt of their abilities to perform the work of their department. Those who favor the idea have certainly never entertained a doubt of the fitness and thorough efficiency of the corps of superintendents, but they believe that examinations could be made more frequently and the work of the superintendents considerably lessened by the proposed plan, and that the actual standing of each school could be determined more minutely and at shorter intervals.

THE GERMAN QUESTION

will, of course, be agitated with the usual Teutonic pertinacity, but the fierce efforts being made to introduce it in the regular course of studies will, no doubt, have the effect of crushing it. The French language is more the language of the Continent than the German, and yet the so-called "German-American citizens," in their petition to the Board of Education, ask to have the bylaws amended so as to read that "Latin and French may be taught in the supplementary grades, while German must be inserted as a regular study in at least one-third of the schools, and in all classes from the second grade of the primary. Last year the whole number of hours occupied in teaching all the public schools was 1,085; in teaching French 107 hours were occupied, and in teaching German 130 hours. There were twelve teachers employed in teaching each of those languages and the cost was:—For French, $7,630; for German, $10,057; so that for twenty-three hours of German (the difference of time between the hours occupied in teaching French and German) the cost was $2,427. The German committee are working diligently to impress upon the school officers an idea of what they consider the absolute importance of having German incorporated in the course of studies, while the plan of the Prussian public schools shows that no language but German is included in the course of studies there pursued. The question will, no doubt, be warmly argued, and, if the Germans win, will give rise to other petitions of as much weight from American citizens of other nationalities. It may possibly occur that a movement will be made to have Chinese taught in some of the schools, as the influx of coolies and the growing intercourse between the United States and China demand consideration.

THE FREE COLLEGE

will not be opened until the 15th inst., and before that time there will be a debate on languages at a meeting of the trustees to be held for that purpose. The professorship of the Latin and Greek languages is vacant, and numerous applications for the position are in the hands of the executive committee. Messrs. W. B. Silber and Fitzgerald Tisdale, both tutors in the department, are working untiringly to obtain the appointment. Mr. Silber is a man of much experience as a teacher, having held the position of instructor of ancient languages and literature in the college since 1851. Mr. Tisdale graduated with honors as a classical scholar from the college and has been occupied some since 1860. Both have just claims to the position, and the Faculty of the college is in such a delicate position that one cannot be recommended more than the other. Dr. C. G. Herberman, lay professor in the college of St. Francis Xavier, one of the most finished Latin and Greek scholars in the city, is also prominently mentioned for appointment, and may possibly slide in as a compromise candidate.

Mr. A. H. Dunden, one of the chief instructors in the evening high school, is also an applicant for the chair. Mr. Dunden is an able scholar, an accomplished gentleman, and would, no doubt, fill the post with much credit, but there is scarcely any room for him to hope that he can obtain it. Some of the Commissioners seem to favor the idea of dividing the department so as to make two professorships, but that end can scarcely be attained. During the coming week the matter will, no doubt, be fully argued and definitely settled.

THE COLLEGE OF ST. FRANCIS XAVIER, under the direction of the Fathers of the Society of Jesus, was reopened yesterday, and the students flocked thither in large numbers.

THE ALLEGED POLICE OUTRAGE.

Another Version of the Affair by the Police—They Positively Deny Assaulting the Emigrant—Medical Testimony.

Captain Petty, of the Fifth precinct, and quite a number of the men attached to his force, also the two doormen employed in the station house, appeared at the Coroner's office yesterday morning to give their testimony in the case of Jacob Berkle, the German emigrant alleged to have been brutally beaten by three or four officers without provocation. It will be seen by a synopsis of the testimony given below that all the witnesses positively deny clubbing Berkle, as he sets forth in his statement heretofore reported. Dr. Neails, of the City Prison, who examined the wounds of the injured man, is of the opinion they were inflicted by some blunt instrument.

Captain Jeremiah Petty, of the Fifth precinct, testified that at the time of Jacob Berkle's arrest for intoxication, on the 27th ult., he (the Captain) was out of town; he always gave orders that no prisoner should be clubbed, and more especially in the station house, and feels satisfied that the Inspector under him would see his orders carried out in that respect.

Thomas Bell, an officer of the Fifth precinct, deposes to finding Berkle sitting on the curb stone corner of Hudson and Franklin streets, with his feet in the gutter; he was in a helpless state of intoxication; he was unable to walk, and on rising fell down again; officer Allen coming along at the time assisted in taking Berkle to the station house; on reaching there the prisoner was laid on the floor; as he was unable to speak English a German interpreter was called in to assist in taking his pedigree; the prisoner was then searched and $21 69 taken from him and given to Sergeant Deshay, then in command of the station house; with assistance the prisoner was taken down stairs and locked up in a cell; the witness did not again see Berkle till eight o'clock the next morning, when he took him to the Tombs, before Judge Hogan, who ordered him to be taken to the prison physician; from the time of the arrest up to the time of having him in the Tombs the witness used no club nor did he strike the prisoner with anything, neither did he see any other person do so; when arrested the prisoner had no wounds on his head or body; I noticed next morning that his head was bandaged up.

James Robinson, doorman of the Fifth precinct station house, testified that he saw officers Bell and Allen bring the prisoner to the station house; he then being intoxicated; the prisoner was taken down stairs after obtaining his pedigree; visited his cell every half hour after ten o'clock; saw no wounds on his head, and the witness denies that he struck him, and saw no one else do so.

Officer Christopher Allen corroborated the statement of officer Bell in every important particular.

The evidence of Sergeant Miles De Shays, in charge of the station house at the time of the arrest, shed no new light on the subject.

Charles Rogers, also a doorman of the Fifth precinct, deposed that on the night of the 27th of August he was on duty at ten o'clock; the prisoner Berkle was one of the men in his charge; between three and four o'clock the next morning heard a loud noise coming from of the cells, and on making an examination found Berkle acting like a crazy man butting his head against the cell door and walls; reported the matter to Sergeant Christie, then on duty; the witness got the keys and went down, accompanied by the sergeant; on returning to the prisoner's cell he was conducting himself in a frantic manner; when the witness opened the cell door Berkle jumped at and seized him by the throat; trying to prevent his escape from the cell the witness seized Berkle and they both fell on the floor; the sergeant came to the assistance of the doorman, but could not violence in so doing. On getting loose the prisoner rushed past both the doorman and sergeant into the corridor, and in his flight ran his head against the glass door in the corridor, which was half shut. He broke the glass in pieces with his head and then seized the framework and held on to it for some time. In endeavoring to get him back Berkle broke from the officers again and forced his way to the main cellar, which stands across the yard, and struck his head against the wall of the prison; then got him inside the corridor door, but found it impossible to get him inside his cell; from the violent manner he went on the superintendent told the doorman to let him loose and he would go up stairs and procure further assistance. Berkle then picked up an iron poker and rushed around the corridor with it in his hands; the superintendent then sent down roundsman Buddington and officer Jacobs; they got hold of the prisoner and tried to get him in his cell; the prisoner turned upon and seized officer Jacobs by the coat and pulled him down; while he was holding the man down, officer Buddington punched the prisoner with his club on the hand to make him loose his hold of Jacob; they then got him in the cell, and witness locked the door; at six o'clock, P. M., the witness looked in the cell and saw blood on the floor; brought the prisoner out to the hydrant and washed his face and head; then noticed a wound over his right eye about a quarter of an inch long; also saw a wound on the right side of his head, which bled freely; made a compress and stopped the bleeding and gave him some water to drink, after which placed him in a different cell: he appeared weak from the loss of blood; the witness did not strike the prisoner while in his charge.

Sergeant Wm. H. Christie corroborated the statement of doorman Rogers in every essential particular.

W. T. Nealis, M. D., City Prison physician, deposed that Berkle was admitted to the Tombs on a charge of insanity; the doctor's attention was specially directed to the prisoner as his head and neck were covered with coagulated blood; his hands were livid and swollen, showing that violence had been used; he was very weak and pale from loss of blood, and walked lame; finding he could not speak English the doctor called an interpreter, who told him the prisoner stated that he had mistaken the place where he had been beaten for a lager beer saloon, where he entered for the purpose of getting some beer; that they then tried to get his money from him, to which he objected, and on that account he was beaten by four policemen; the doctor subsequently made an examination and found three contused wounds of the head—one on the forehead, the others on the top of the head; both hands excessively swollen, livid and some abrasions on them; on the left arm the doctor found several livid contusions, one very large one on the elbow; the left leg, from the hip to the foot, was also marked by several contusions; on the breast a large contusion was found; over the stomach was a large livid patch, which he said was done by the policeman putting his foot on him; the doctor had Berkle sent to the Emigrant Hospital, as he did not come under the charge of the city authorities; in the doctor's opinion the above described wounds were caused by some blunt instrument by which the prisoner had been beaten.

Owing to the absence of several witnesses the further investigation of the case was adjourned till to-morrow (Wednesday), at eleven o'clock.

EXTENSIVE CONFIDENCE OPERATIONS.

Wholesale Swindling of Wholesale Merchants—A Nice Little Game and Very Nicely Played—Mercantile Shrewdness Outdone by the Boldness of Brass and Chicanery of Cheek.

A series of very bold and astonishingly successful operations in the confidence way were brought to light yesterday afternoon, at the Tombs Police Court. The desire to sell goods is no doubt a "ruling passion strong" with all merchants, but how so many of them could be so effectually victimized as in this case is at once a marvel and a mystery. The facts of the case are briefly told, and if not materially adorning the narrative, at least point an unmistakable moral.

A few days ago, hurriedly stepping in and out of leading mercantile establishments, wholesale dealers in dry goods, groceries, crockery, boots and shoes, and hardware and the whole catalogue of merchantable goods, in fact, and with a sprightly business air and dash of go-ahead about him which, with good clothes, fine manners and a voluble tongue, go a good way in one's favor and leave a prepossessing effect, was a young man giving his name as William Morris. He has a pleasant address, clear, bold look of the eye and spoke promptly and to the point. He signified his wish to purchase goods as agent of Woods, Yeatman & Co., of the Cumberland Iron Works, of Tennessee. He looked every inch such an agent as this well known firm would probably send. He looked and smiled and talked as such an agent might be expected to look and smile and talk. He stated that he knew his business. He showed that he was a good judge of goods. He quickly ran through the stock, quickly made his selections and was a free and liberal buyer. The purchases concluded, he quietly gave directions as to the shipment of the goods, which were to be sent to Woods, Yeatman & Co., in care of Messrs. Langley & Kincaird, Cincinnati, ordered them to be charged to account, received the bills of lading, bowed and smiled if anything more pleasantly than when he came in, and then left. He went on swimmingly. Everybody believed him and sold him goods. Mr. James E. Halsey, of the firm of Day & Halsey, dealers in hardware at No. 248 Canal street, on the 25th of August sold him a bill of goods amounting to $3,000. It struck him that taking the bare and unsupported statements of this young man was hardly the thing. Before shipping the goods he thought, as a mere matter of business prudence, it was worth while to telegraph Messrs. Woods & Yeatman, and he did telegraph them. Then came back the following reply:—

ERIE, Tenn., Sept. 4, 1869.

TO DAY & HALSEY, 148 Canal street, New York:—
William Morris is not authorized to buy goods for us.

Messrs. Day & Halsey unboxed their goods and replaced them on their shelves. This telegram, with about the lightning speed it came from far away Tennessee, sped on its circuit among those who had been selling their goods to Mr. Morris. To some it came in time to save them from loss. To others it came too late, the goods they had sold having been shipped as per orders. In plain Saxon, this was a pretty go. Telegrams poured in lively upon Messrs. Langley & Kincaird, Cincinnati, to hold the goods in their care, which telegrams, happily, in many cases were in season. The number of victims of this young man's stories is not yet known. It is understood that he has purchased $50,000 worth of goods at least, and perhaps two or three times that amount. As far as known he commenced his purchases on the 5th of last month, and having kept at it three weeks undetected, and in fact, unsuspected the aggregate of his bills must certainly be large. Among his known victims are Maynard, Wells & Co., No. 30 Warren street, who sold him boots and shoes to the amount of $2,000; Southwick, Wheelock & Co., of No. 54 White street, who also sold him a large bill of boots and shoes; W. H. Belcher & Co., No. 41 Warren street, who sold him $1,000 worth of groceries; William J. Peake & Co., No. 48 White street, who sold him $800 worth of dry goods; Barrett, Stephens & Co., No. 92 Warren street, who sold him a bill of crockery to the amount of $350, and Rindskoff, Brothers & Co., No. 79 Walker street, who sold him a bill of woollens and cloth goods amounting to $300.

All the abovenamed parties and others too numerous to mention appeared yesterday at the Tombs as complainants against Morris. Shortly after the receipt of the telegram given above the police were put on his track and the result was his arrest and conveyance to the Tombs, as a prisoner. Mr. Asa R. Runyon, salesman for the firm of William J. Peake & Co., made an affidavit, setting forth that on the 5th of August last the accused came into their place of business and represented that he had an order from Woods, Yeatman & Co., of the Cumberland Ironworks, of Tennessee. to buy goods on their account; believing this statement to be true he sold him a bill of dry goods to the amount of $800 to the credit of Woods, Yeatman & Co.; by direction of the accused the goods thus sold were shipped to Woods, Yeatman & Co., in care of Langley & Kincaird, Cincinnati; the bills of lading were delivered to the accused; he had since learned from Mr. James E. Halsey that he had sold goods tothe same party under similar representations; Mr. Halsey also told him that he had telegraphed to Woods, Yeatman & Co. to learn whether Morris was their agent for the purchase of goods, and that he had received a telegram denying his authority to buy goods on their account.

James E. Halsey, of the firm of Day & Halsey, in another affidavit set forth that on or about the 25th of August the accused through similar representations to those detailed above, purchased of him a bill of goods amounting to about $3,000, with the same directions as to shipping them. Before shipping them he telegraphed to Woods & Yeatman to ascertain if the said Morris was authorized to buy goods on their account, and received a reply denying giving any such authority. The telegram given above was affixed to the affidavit. Others of the complainants who were present stood ready to made similar affidavits, but Aldermen O'Brien, before whom they appeared, thought this unnecessary, at least at the present stage of the proceedings. After these affidavits were taken the prisoner was consigned, in default of bail, to a cell inside to await further examination, which was set down for ten A. M. next Friday. The prisoner seems very little disconcerted at his arrest. He does not evince half the excitement or concern of his merchant creditors and victims.

SINGULAR REVELATION OF CRIME.

Alleged Discovery of a Case of Forgery Among the Effects of a Drowned Man.

Ten times the thousand nights it took to tell the Oriental variations yclept the "Arabian Nights Entertainment," would it take to tell the mysterious processes by which crime is revealed. One of the latest of these mysterious revelations was made yesterday morning. A young man—and now that he is dead and beyond the power of vindicating himself at any earthly tribunal, we forbear giving his name—was drowned, a few days since, at Cape May. On examining his trunk a photograph was found of a young man known by the name of Martin Leland, and also letters addressed to him. These letters pointed clearly, as alleged, to Leland as one of the principals in a little pecuniary transaction in the City of Brotherly Love. This transaction was of this nature:—A gentleman recently called at one of the offices of the City Department and bought a "city warrant, Highway Department," of the value of $233 95. This was all well enough, but two hours afterwards two forged warrants for the same amount were sold to Bryan & Co. and Pearson & Thompson, two firms of brokers. Mr. Charles K. Willetts, employed at J. A. Ridgway's office, No. 57 South Third street, Philadelphia, happened to see the photograph of Leland, and at once identified it as the likeness of the young man purchasing the original warrant. A search was consequently instituted for Leland and he was found in this city, and being found was arrested and locked up in the Tombs. Mr. Willetts having made an affidavit to the leading facts, as stated above, the accused was this morning brought before Alderman O'Brien and remanded to await a requisition from the Governor of Pennsylvania for his conveyance to Philadelphia and trial there upon a charge of forgery. The accused is a young man of genteel and prepossessing appearance. He has lived for several years past in this city, and until recently was employed as a clerk in a prominent legal firm. Hardly had he been remanded to prison when he was taken on a writ of habeas corpus before the Superior Court.

Having arrived before Judge McCunn the release of the defendant was asked for this morning, on the ground that neither the committal nor the affidavits upon which it was based set forth facts sufficient to constitute the crime alleged. The following affidavit by Carlisle R. Willetts is the one referred to:—

Martin Leland, here present, came to the place of business of J. E. Ridgway, at No. 57 South Third street, in the city of Philadelphia, and brought a city warrant of the city of Philadelphia, Highway Department issue, drawn to the order of Abraham Kulte for the sum of $233 95. That two hours afterward two forged warrants were sold, which were an exact copy of the warrant sold to the said Leland—one to Brown & Co. and the other to Pearson & Thomson, who are brokers, doing business in the city of Philadelphia. Deponent is further informed and believes that the said Martin Leland uttered and published as true one of said false, forged and counterfeit warrants to Pearson & Thomson with the intent to cheat and defraud them. Deponent further says that said Martin Leland is now a fugitive from justice from the city of Philadelphia on the above mentioned charge of forgery, and deponent therefore prays that said Martin Leland may be held to await requisition from the Governor of the State of Pennsylvania on the charge of forgery.

The Court adjourned the proceedings till to-day.

INTERNAL REVENUE MATTERS.

Meeting of German Cigar Dealers and Manufacturers—A Small Attendance—The Proposed Plan for Organization—Intentions of the Society—The Courts to be Appealed To.

The meeting was announced as a mass meeting, but the attendance yesterday afternoon at the Germania Assembly Rooms, in the Bowery, near First street, was rather small. At about three o'clock the persons present, numbering about 100, were called to order and Mr. S. Blum was called to preside. In taking the chair Mr. Blum made a speech, regretting that so small a percentage of the cigar trade in the city and its vicinity was represented. But he hoped that this would not deter those present from proceeding with the work now opened to protect their rights, as all the others who still hold back will gradually come in. The objects of the proposed organization, Mr. Blum declared to be, not to make opposition to the laws of the United States, but to procure some relief from the chicanery of some of the underlings, who seek to explain certain provisions of the revenue laws to the oppression of their trade. They were all ready and willing, and he hoped that there was none to oppose it, that the Union war debt be paid, and hence that all just impositions of taxes be fairly met. But he knew that some of the exactions should be opposed, as not within the true meaning of the law. He himself, Mr. Blum, was arrested on the charge that he had sold untaxed cigars. He had assured the authorities that the cigars were taken from stamped boxes, and he had not known of any provision of law prohibiting this.

Mr. H. Scheidemantel was chosen secretary.

The Chairman then read the following preamble and resolutions, prepared by a committee appointed by a preliminary meeting of the trade held at Karl's Germania Hall, 42 avenue A, on the 31st of August, and ordered to be submitted to this meeting:—

In consideration and specially in view that the poorer portion of our traders are at present exposed to the whims and the arbitrary will of revenue officers and to any hairsplitting interpretation of the law, we have arrived at the unanimous opinion that it is necessary, for the preservation of ourselves and the welfare of our families, to organize our trade for the main purpose to take all lawful measures and all legally possible means to protect honest dealers and manufacturers innocently accused and arrested, and to save them from the hands of their oppressors.

Further, if circumstances should warrant it, to petition Congress for a change of the laws in relation to our trade, and to have the tax imposed on the raw material.

In consideration of the foregoing, and being fully impressed with the importance of the subject, the members of the trade here represented are requested to adopt the following:—

Resolved, That the manufacturers and dealers of cigars here present do organize and constitute themselves into a society under the name of "The Cigar Manufacturers and Cigar Dealers' Protective Union."

Resolved, That each member is to pay the sum of three dollars as initiation fee.

Resolved, That the monthly dues are fifty cents.

Resolved, That the organization proceed at once to elect a president, two vice presidents, a treasurer, a financial, a recording and a corresponding secretary, three trustees and a finance committee of five members.

There were some further resolutions appended to the above relative to the drafting of a constitution and the publication of appeals to the trade in the public journals.

One of these propositions, that requiring the immediate payment of $3 initiation, gave rise to some debate, during which the assurance was given by the leading men of the movement that it is the intention to procure legal assistance for all members of the proposed association who may unjustly be arrested for imaginary offences against the revenue laws; but that no one against whom the charge may be just and well founded will be entitled to the aid of the society. The meeting proceeded to vote seriatim upon the resolutions proposed, and the first was adopted unanimously.

Mr. S. BLUM addressed the meeting in favor of the second resolution as proposed; money, he said, was nervus rerum, they must have a fund to protect their members against the chicaneries of the officers of the law and to bring a test case into the courts. He urged the adoption of the resolution and it was finally carried, but not without eliciting another debate, the result of which was an amendment making the initiation fee two dollars. The other resolutions were then adopted without change.

It was the general understanding that the activity of the society shall not extend to cases of unjust arrest or charges before its organization, nor to other persons than members. But it was also asserted, that no one who knowingly and willfully transgresses the law can have any claim to aid from the society, as it is not intended to help the law breakers, but to insist upon a fair and reasonable interpretation of existing laws.

The election of officers was postponed to the next meeting.

PROBABLE HOMICIDE.

Late yesterday afternoon information reached the Coroner's office that Mr. Joseph Friedlander, a German, forty-seven years of age, proprietor of a vinegar factory, and living at No. 209 Third street, was lying in an extremely critical condition from the effects of violence inflicted upon him. It is alleged that on the 24th ultimo he became involved in a quarrel with a man and woman, during which they beat him on the head and body with the heavy cover of a milk can. Mr. Friedlander has been under the care of Drs. Krockowizer and Hirsch, and they, believing that he could live but a few hours, recommended that his ante-mortem statement should be secured before he lapsed into a state of unconsciousness. Coroner Flynn has charge of the case. The assailants of the wounded man, although known, it is stated, have not yet been taken into custody.

BROOKLYN INTELLIGENCE.

THE NEW FIRE DEPARTMENT.—There were about thirty applicants examined by surgeons for admission, as drivers, to the Paid Fire Department, all of whom passed successfully. The salary attached to the position is $900.

A LIQUOR DEALER IN TROUBLE.—John Schleich, a retail liquor dealer at the corner of Whipple street and Throop avenue, was arrested yesterday on the charge of carrying on the business without paying the special tax. He was brought before United States Commissioner Newton, and held to bail in the sum of $2,500.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.—Frederick Munn, a West Flushing farmer, was arrested yesterday in Williamsburg and locked up in the Fourth street station house for driving a horse which was in a diseased and suffering condition. The arrest was caused by one of Mr. Bergh's agents.

ATTEMPTED SAFE BREAKING.—An attempt was made at an early hour yesterday morning to break open a safe in the packing establishment of Eugene Finkle & Co., South First and Fifth streets, Eastern District, by thieves, who effected an entrance through a rear window. Failing to force the safe, which contained a large sum of money, the burglars ransacked a desk, and departed with a few dollars in defaced fractional currency.

LARCENY OF A WATCH AND CHAIN.—James Butler, aged twenty-two years, was arrested yesterday by the Fiftieth precinct police on the charge of having stolen a watch and chain, valued at sixty-five dollars, from John Duffy while in the liquor store of Thomas Doyle, Fifth avenue, near Eighth street. Butler, who claimed that he took the watch for safekeeping, was committed by Justice Walsh to await the action of the Grand Jury.

JUVENILE OFFENDERS.—William H. Pope, fourteen years of age, was fined twenty dollars yesterday, by Justice Voorhies, for clubbing and wounding Maria Ann Ballard, a girl of twelve years, at No. 10 North Ninth street, E. D. The assault grew out of a fracas between the parents of the children. The same Justice committed John Wilson and Thomas McLaughlin to the House of Refuge for having in their possession a roll of cloth stolen from the store No. 204 Grand street, E. D. The boys were arrested in Madison street, New York, while attempting to sell the cloth.

THE BRIDGE STREET PAVEMENT INJUNCTION.—A compromise has been effected between the property owners on Bridge street and the Water Board. The Commissioners proposed to lay Belgian pavement along that street, against which a majority of the land owners rebelled. An application was to have been made yesterday before Judge Barnard, in the Supreme Court, special term, by the counsel of the property owners for a permanent injunction against the Commissioners, but the Commissioners stated that they had no desire to repave the street, whereupon the suit was withdrawn.

THE UNION FERRY COMPANY AND THE BROOKLYN CITY HOSPITAL.

A Slight Difference of About $3,000,000 Alleged to be Due the Hospital from the Ferry Company.

For some time past it is understood negotiations have been pending between certain highly influential and wealthy citizens of Brooklyn for the initiation of the requisite measures towards the commencement of a legal crusade against the Union Ferry Company for the purpose of recovering the sum of $3,000,000, or thereabout, believed to be due the Brooklyn City Hospital by the ferry corporation under the provisions of the charter of the Union Ferry Company, which provides for the payment to the hospital fund in question of all the earnings of that corporation over and above their expenses and ten per cent.

For several years past the earnings have, it is alleged, increased to so high a rate as to admit of the distribution of extra shares among the stockholders, at the end of each half decade of years, amounting in the aggregate to a total reserve over and above the actual dividend allowed by law of nearly twenty per cent, or almost double the original investment, which sum should have gone, it is claimed, according to law, towards the Brooklyn City Hospital fund. The only reason possible to assign for the apparent disregard of this fact by the Board of Trustees lies in the coincidence, if the circumstance can so be termed, that a majority of the Hospital trustees are also members of the Union Ferry Company. The rates now paid by poor patients at the hospital range from five dollars to ten dollars per week, which sum could readily be reduced to a merely nominal cost: say one dollar, or perhaps even less, were the fund sufficiently augmented to admit of so doing. This much could, of course, readily be accomplished were the revenue of the institution increased to the proportion which this reimbursement would afford. As the case now stands, the income derived is so small as not to admit of the reception of poor persons who cannot pay the requisite weekly board, and these latter are compelled to go to the County Hospital at Flatbush, where paupers are treated.

At a recent meeting of the Citizen's Reform Association, one of the members of that organization present, while discussing the abuses of corporations, charged the Union Ferry Company with having increased their rate of fare from one cent to two, upon the pretext of the high cost of coal, several years ago, since which time traffic had steadily increased and the earnings commensurately, until now the company had been adding to the premium on its stock by issuing gratuitous shares to the stockholders, which should by right accrue to the fund of the Brooklyn City Hospital. In justice to the representative of the Ferry Company at the meeting it is due to state that Mr. N. B. Morse, President of the company, immediately stated that he would afford all the facilities requisite to a committee of the Association whenever it should see fit to appoint such for the purpose of examining their affairs. But he reserved the right of the company to issue stock whenever it saw fit to do so.

The whole amount received by the hospital during the year 1868 was $64,207, while the expenditures were $60,155, leaving a balance [illegible]51. The total number of patients [illegible] establishment in 1847 up to the 1st of January of the present year was 19,789. The present building, located in Raymond street, on the site of Fort Greene, was erected in 1851, and is capable of accommodating about 250 patients, but is insufficient for the present wants of a city [illegible]. Extensive additions are required, a thorough overhauling and removal of old flooring and replastering of the [illegible] would be highly beneficial in eradicating the presence of hospital gangrene which pervades institution of the kind of several years' standing to an extent greatly detrimental to the recovery of wounded patients. The chief support is derived from the Seamens' Hospital fund, the Brooklyn institution being a great favorite of the invalid mariner in this port. Two-thirds of the accidentally injured throughout the city are also taken here, for the care of whom the city pays $3,000 a year only. The following are the names of the members of the board of trustees:—William H. Allen, Arthur W. Benson, Charles E. Bill, Alexander V. Blake, S. B. Chittenden, Horace B. Claflin, Peter C. Cornell, Isaac H. Frothingham, John Greenwood, John Halsey, A. A. Low, Thomas Messenger, Joshua L. Pope, Henry G. Nichols, Henry E. Pierrepont, William M. Richards, Cyrus P. Smith, Walter S. Tisdale, D. W. Wetmore, Alex. M. White. The Mayor of the city is a member ex-officio.

THE NEWS.

Europe.

Cable telegrams are dated September 6.

Napoleon was in decidedly weak health, but the despatches, generally, go to show that a fatal result was not anticipated. The Paris Bourse was considerably excited. The French Senate adopted the Senatus Consultum. Spain proposes to reduce the number of bishops. Cardinal Cullen orders a thanksgiving for the disestablishment of the State Church in Ireland. The Protestant prelates of Ireland are engaged in reorganizing the Church.

By steamship at this port we have mail details of our cable telegrams to the 27th of August, embracing a variety of useful matter.

Had Eugénie visited Constantinople she was to have had a brilliant reception and been taken all over the harem, as shown by the Turkish State programme.

The Cunard steamship Russia, from Liverpool the 28th and Queenstown the 29th of August, arrived at this port soon after one o'clock this morning.

Turkey and Egypt.

Cable despatches from Constantinople and London indicate an anxiety on the part of the Khedive of Egypt to maintain friendly relations with the Sultan if possible.

Our special correspondence by mail from Constantinople gives an interesting resume of the causes which have excited and influenced the difficulty between the Sublime Porte and the Viceroy of Egypt.

The Arctic Seas.

Our correspondent with Dr. Haeys' exploring expedition writes from Ivigtut, South Greeland, under date of July 27. Dr. Hayes' ship, the Panther, was cordially received by the Esquimaux at Julianshaab, where a ball was got up in its honor. The mosquitoes and flies were in olerable. The letter will be found extremely interesting.

Cuba.

The foreign residents of Havana are enlisting to take the place of the volunteers after the latter go to the front. General Quesada attacked Las Tunas on the 16th ult. with a large force, and a severe battle ensued. The Spaniards lost 100 and the Cubans 250 killed; but the result of the victory is not stated.

Miscellaneous.

General Rawlins died yesterday afternoon. The President arrived at his bedside too late, death having ensued before he could reach it.

Senator Fessenden remains in the same critical condition as during Sunday night.

The report of an appalling casualty comes from the coal mining regions. The coal breaker and outbuildings of the Avondale mine, at Plymouth, Pa., caught fire yesterday, and 200 persons, men and boys, who were working in the mine beneath were cut off from all mode of escape and were suffocated. Up to a late hour last night the fire was still burning, and the black damp prevented any attempt being made to open a way to the victims. Two men who went down the shaft to find a way were almost instantly suffocated, and were found dead by two others coming after.

A welcome rain storm visited Philadelphia last evening. It has not had much effect on the thirsty city yet, but strong hopes are entertained that the water famine is drawing to a close.

The Susquehanna Railroad election takes place at Albany to-day. Fisk is there.

Governor Hoffman has appointed a long list of distinguished New Yorkers delegates to the Southern Commercial Convention to meet at Louisville, Ky., on the 12th of October. Among the lambs and lions apt to lie down together under the appointment are Horatio Seymour, Horace Greeley, William Cullen Bryant, William M. Tweed, Marshall O. Roberts, Freeman Clarke, John Tracy and others.

James J. Brooks, a special revenue officer in Philadelphia, was shot and mortally wounded yesterday morning by a party of ruffians in a cigar store which had been seized and placed in charge of Brooks for violation of the revenue laws. $5,000 reward is offered for the arrest of the assailants, who fled to Fairmount Park and disappeared.

Argument was commenced yesterday in the Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas in the contested election case involving all the municipal officers of Philadelphia elected last October. The evidence taken fills 4,000 pages.

The State Department at Washington recently notified Governor Bowie, of Maryland, that information had been received at the Department to the effect that seven convicts and paupers had sailed from Bremen on the German bark Atalanta, for Baltimore. The bark arrived at Baltimore on Saturday, and the alleged convicts and paupers were detained until yesterday, when, on investigation, it was shown that the parties were all respectable farmers, possessing considerable means, and that the charges were instigated by a rival emigrant line in New York.

The American steamer Hornet is still discharging her coals at Halifax and no contraband goods have been discovered.

Charles R. Buckalew has been nominated by the democrats of the Northumberland (Pa.) district for State Senator.

At Lowell, Mass., yesterday, Miss Louisa Miner was examined on the charge of attempting to poison Dr. L. W. Jenness and his family. The evidence for the prosecution went to show that Miss Miner was a frequent visitor at the doctor's house, and becoming angry because another young lady was about to visit the family, had made several pies and put arsenic in them. The doctor and two ladies of his family after partaking felt all the symptoms of poison, but timely assistance had brought them round again.

A fire broke out in the State Prison at Auburn yesterday morning, which destroyed some lumber sheds and store houses. Several contractors lose about $25,000; the State loss is small.

Mrs. Catharine Washington, who claimed to be a relation of President Washington, died at her residence in Delhi township, Ohio, on Saturday, aged eighty years. She was born and married on the Washington estate, in Culpepper county, Va.

On the night of the 31st ult., at Malade station, Utah Territory, Wells, Fargo & Co.'s coach, which left Helena, Montana, three days before, was stopped by highwaymen and robbed of $30,000 in gold. About $40,000 in the hands of the passengers escaped the notice of the freebooters.

The British bark Ezra ran ashore on Body's Island, below Norfolk, Va., a few days since, and is a total loss. A small boat, containing the captain and his wife, the chief mate, one boy and two seamen, in attempting to make the shore was capsized and all hands were drowned.

A great fire occurred in Richmond, Va., last night, the loss amounting to $175,000.

The City.

In the Coroner's investigation into the alleged outrage on Jacob Berkle, the German emigrant, by policemen, Captain Petty and his doormen testified yesterday that Berkle was very drunk when brought to the station house, and that he received his bruises while trying to escape, running his head against the wall and the glass door in the corridor.

The persons who were supposed to have been lost in the bay by the capsizing of a sailboat off Fort Richmond were all picked up and are now safe.

The stock market yesterday was weak and declined. Gold rose to 137¾, fell to 136¼, and closed 137 a 137¼.

Beef cattle were in tolerably active demand yesterday, and with only moderate arrivals prices were quite steady at 15½c. a 16½c. for prime and extra, 14½c. a 15¼c. for fair to good, and 11c. a 14c. for inferior to ordinary. The major part of the offerings was fair to good in quality. Milch cows were slow of sale, but prices were unchanged, prime and extra being quoted $90 a $125 each; fair to good, $75 a $85, and inferior to common $40 a $70. Veal calves were in fair request and firmer, prime and extra selling at 11c. a 12½c.; common to good at 10c. a 11c., and inferior 9c. a 9½c. Sheep were steady, with a fair demand. Prime and extra were quoted at 6½c. a 7½c., common to good 5c. a 6c., and inferior 4c. a 4½d. Lambs were selling at from 7½c. to 9c. Swine were quiet at 9c. a 10c. for common to prime, with arrivals of 6,203 head, chiefly for slaughterers.

The Administration—The Northern and Southern Democracy.

The administration of General Grant, all through considered, is getting on very well. It is reducing expenditures and the debt, increasing the revenue receipts, ferreting out frauds and lopping off excrescences from the Treasury; it is going smoothly and in a conciliatory spirit with the work of Southern reconstruction, and is keeping withal a sharp eye on the Cuban question, notwithstanding the fact that the President has, apparently, been devoting the whole summer to pleasuring excursions to the seashore, the mountains and the springs. We expect that he will make a good report of his stewardship in his first annual message to Congress. Meanwhile the republican party, excepting a few disappointed spoilsmen and carpet baggers, is satisfied with General Grant; but what of the democracy? What is the prospect for them?

The national democracy is like a couple of exhausted locomotives on a pair of railroad turntables. The Northern and Southern wings having switched off on separate tracks, after a time they find themselves whirling around a circle in order to discover a point at which they can again join, and, once again on the same track, get up steam and dash away as they did of yore, which means the days before the war. But time and the progress of the last few years have made wonderful changes in the essence and activity of the pure democracy. In the South ten years ago it was high treason to talk against slavery, and the idea of negro suffrage would have suggested a wholesale human barbecue of those who should dare to entertain the horrible heresy.

The old hunker democracy of the North at the same time joined hands with their brethren of the South, and, if not quite so bitter and vindictive, they were fully as intolerant as the Southern Hotspurs and fire-eaters. During the time that has since elapsed, however, the Southerners, educated by the inexorable experiences of the war, have cooled their blood, toned down their high temper and been brought at last to look their position fairly and squarely in the face. Beaten on the field and their foes in full possession of the government in all its branches, they have been obliged, however unwillingly, to yield to the pressure of circumstance and to accept and acquiesce in the new order of things. And it is strange to see that while the old Southern leaders, like Lee, Joe Johnston, Wade Hampton, Longstreet, Beauregard and many others, have announced themselves content, even though perforce, and that while the rank and file in Virginia have been marching to the polls in the same line with liberal republicans, and electing a Governor and a State Legislature of their own, and that while in the State of Mississippi, the home of Jeff Davis—who hasn't yet "been hung on a sour apple tree," but is living in clover like a nabob across the water—we have seen old democrats coming forward, accepting the situation as it stands—fifteenth amendment, negro suffrage, a hearty endorsement of General Grant's administration, and all—and uniting with the moderate republicans in order to defeat the radicals; and furthermore, while we see numbers of the most respectable and influential democratic papers in the South casting aside their old prejudices and pronouncing unreservedly in favor of measures heretofore hated and spurned; while we see all these evidences of the intentions of the Southern democracy to let the dead past bury its dead, to recognize the positive fact of the progress of the age, and to aim at the realization of the rich fruits and blessings of a time of peace, the rewards of frugality and industry, the introduction of new energies into the whole industrial system of the South by the aid of capital and labor from the North and other more distant places—while we see these things, we say, it is both shameful and mortifying to witness in the democracy of the North a desire to revive a spirit of hostility among the Southern democracy against the North, to hold out to them a hollow prize in the shape of a hope of overturning the decisive national legislation of the past four years.

It will not be long, we dare say, before the South, with its expectant revenue of three hundred millions this year from its great staples, will be in a condition to dictate terms to the democracy and all other parties in the North. And when the Southern democracy say they are in favor of negro suffrage, now that they cannot well get rid of it—and from experience thus far, they are more disposed to like it than dislike it, believing that it will in the end become an element of strength to themselves rather than to their enemies—when the Southern democracy say this, it is manifest that any attempt on the part of the Northern democracy to make them change their purpose, or to interfere with their plans, is both mischievous and dangerous. It is even insinuated in political circles that the radicals begin to apprehend that they have caught a Tartar in this question of negro suffrage, and that, instead of the enfranchised negroes in the South clinging to them like wax, they are likely to drop them like hot potatoes and return with their old affections to their old homes and adhere to the interests of their old masters. Therefore the rampant Northern democracy should listen to the significant voices as they come borne upon the genial breezes of the Southern clime, beseeching them not to disturb the South in its present career towards unexampled physical and pecuniary prosperity, and eventually to a reunion with their Northern brethren that will re-establish the power of the democracy upon a national foundation that will endure for half a century. Meanwhile let the old democratic locomotives keep on whirling until a proper time for recoupling arrives, when, again united in bonds of steel, they can fly along once more upon the same broad guage track to victory and glory.

As matters now stand the game for the succession is in the hand of General Grant, and the only hope for the Northern democracy lies in a reunion with their advanced brethren of the South.

Another Terrible Coal Mine Disaster.

Our telegraphic despatches bring us a heart-rending account of another of these frequently, of late, recurring disasters in coal mines here at home and in Europe. This last reported, if the results, when all the facts are known should prove as fatal as the despatch unfortunately leads us to fear, must be accounted the most harrowing and fatal to human life that has yet occurred in this country. The scene of this most recent catastrophe is at the Avondale mines at Plymouth, about twenty miles south of Scranton, Pennsylvania. It is reported that in the coal mines at this place the burning of a "coal breaker" threatens with one common death, through suffocation, no less than the appaling number of two hundred human beings. This number of persons—men and boys—it is known were in the mine at the breaking out of the fire. The mine is described as the Steuben shaft—a mine owned by the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company. The fire broke out in the flue at the bottom of the Steuben shaft, and spread with such rapidity, and was attended with such devastating effect, that the whole "breaker" was immediately ignited, the outbuildings enveloped in flames and in an incredibly short time consumed. The hoisting apparatus, the only avenue for escape for the unfortunate men whenever its use could be made available for that purpose, shared the same fate. The greatest excitement prevailed, and the whole country round had hurried to the terrible scene. A large staff of physicians, summoned from Scranton and surrounding towns, were on the ground prepared to render all the aid in their power should the unfortunate men not be passed all such humane offices. A number of fire engines were also present, and vigorously worked by the excited people.

The latest despatch from the scene reports that the shaft was cleared, and that two men were lowered in a bucket into the shaft. They had descended sixty or seventy yards when they came to a closed gangway door, which resisted all their efforts to force open. They found three dead mules outside the door. No signs of life were discovered, and it is feared that all the miners have perished.

Here is another, the saddest chapter of horrors to those which have lately so shocked humanity. These accidents, or by whatever other name they may be called, have followed in quick and disastrous succession. Among the most terrible of them may be enumerated the coal mine explosion at St. Helen's, near Liverpool, on the 22d July last, which resulted in the death of fifty-three men. The Ferndale colliery disaster, on the 10th June, in South Wales, in which a like number of victims—fifty-three perished; that at Lancashire, England, twenty-eight killed; the coal mine explosion, near Dresden, Saxony, on the 2d August, in which 321 perished; the colliery explosion at Firminy, near St. Etienne, France, whereby fourteen persons lost their lives. And to this sad recital we fear that this later disaster at the Avondale mines now reported must be added with the sad reality that all in the mine at the breaking out of the fire, two hundred persons, have perished by suffocation. Here is sad cause enough to raise the question and to have it discussed in all its bearings—is there no means that can be devised to prevent the terrible loss of life in coal mines, so subject to explosion? or, better still, cannot means be devised to prevent these explosions altogether.

The German Bishops in the Roman Council.

The hierarchical assemblage of German bishops in Fulda, and the programme adopted by these prelates as indicating the course which they will observe in the Ecumenical Council in Rome, reported by our special cable telegram yesterday, stand forth as subjects of very considerable importance when viewed with reference to the politico-religious condition existing in Europe. The German episcopacy expresses complete fealty to the Holy See, couched, however, in words of citizen independence and fraternal toleration. They keep, consequently, well up with the spirit of the age, and will, therefore, assume a very prominent part in the assemblage. This will be disagreeable to Napoleon—bad for Bonapartism. Napoleon the First, in the year 1809, said "he deemed it proper for the security of his empire and of his people to resume the grant of Charlemagne," and subsequently, in his interview with Pope Pius the Seventh, in Rome, proposed that France should "wield the sword" and his Holiness "carry the keys of St. Peter." The Pope described him as a comedian (comediante). Yet, nothwithstanding this, Napoleon the Third has frequently endeavored to elaborate the "idea" into a reality, Pius the Ninth is very shrewd in his perception of men and motives and inflexible in will, although mild in manner. He appreciates modern Germany—distrusts modern Bonapartism. Hence it is very probable that both in and after the coming council the custody of both the sword and the keys will be in the hands of the Germans. Is it like the writing on the wall?

Napoleon to the Viceroy—Peace on Any Terms.

We have the news from London that the Khedive or Viceroy of Egypt has promptly telegraphed to Constantinople his assent to the severe conditions of the Sultan, military, financial and tributary, insisted on in the recent ominous letter of the Sultan, thus leaving no excuse for any hostile action on his part. At the same time the Khedive was on his way to the Sultan, to make assurance doubly sure. This of itself would simply signify that Ismail Pacha is not in a position to defy the Sultan; but it means much more in connection with what follows. It appears that the French Minister at Constantinople had telegraphed the main points of the Sultan's letter to the Khedive before he reached Alexandria, at the same time urgently advising him to submit to its terms.

From this we perceive that Napoleon desires peace for the present between the Sultan and the Viceroy, however offensive to the latter the terms may be. And why? Because, it may be said, Napoleon is apprehensive that a rupture between Turkey and Egypt at this crisis would not only involve all the great European Powers, but might be followed by serious internal embarrassments in France. All such conjectures, however, touching this Egyptian question are trifles to Napoleon now compared with the very delicate question of his health, and the crisis which his death may bring upon France. It is doubtless in view of this possible crisis that the Emperor of all things desires peace with his neighbors and peace on the Eastern question. He wishes to reserve his strength intact for the conflict with the radical republicans of France and all the factions opposed to the empire. Hence this advice of the French Minister at Constantinople to the Egyptian Viceroy. Hence "the empire is peace" because the internal condition of France and the convulsion threatened in a certain event demand it. There has never been an occasion in which peace in France and peace in Europe depended so much upon the slender thread of a single life as they depend upon the life of Napoleon at this crisis.

Tennessee Politics—One Wing of the Republican Brethren "Satisfied."

Daylight appears to be dawning through the almost impenetrable fog of Tennessee politics. A short time since the Stokes faction of radicals published a manifesto, in which they declared the late election to be a fraud or something worse, and that Senter's election by some seventy thousand majority was a cheat upon the republican party. Stokes and Senter both galloped off to Washington, and the reports about what each accomplished with the the Executive and heads of departments have been variously reported by Washington correspondents and commented upon by newspaper editors. At one time it was Senter, at another it was Stokes—pull Senter, pull Stokes; pull Dick, pull Devil. But, whatever may have been done by Stokes, it is clear, from an article we give to-day from the Knoxville Herald and Press—Senter organ—that Governor Senter has won the race, having entered the home-stretch and crossed the score many lengths in advance of his adversary. Governor Senter, on his return home, reports that in his interview with the President he was voluntarily assured by General Grant that he recognized him as the Governor de facto and the lawful Governor elect of the State; that he had no more right, and thought no more of doing so, to inquire into the regularity of the Tennessee election than he would have to take cognizance of and set aside the elections in Ohio, Pennsylvania or New York. He further stated that no federal officer in Tennessee should be removed for having voted for Senter or for universal suffrage candidates for the Legislature. This declaration will prove a generous nervine to those who, in defiance of Secretary Boutwell's radical edict in favor of Stokes, went for Senter and the new Legislature. And to put a climax upon this triumph of the Senter wing of the Tennessee republicans, with its admixture of democracy, the Governor utterly repudiates the idea of reconvening the defunct Legislature, from which the Stokes men anticipated so much.

Senator Brownlow, in a letter we published yesterday, endorses Senter as good enough republican for him, and proceeds to disclaim any responsibility for the return of "democratic, conservative or rebel members to the Legislature," and for any unlawful, anarchical action they may take. The Parson, like a physician who has just written a powerful prescription for a patient in extremity, concludes:—"In the event that the General Assembly—the one recently elected—shall refuse to adopt the fifteenth amendment, which I do not believe, and shall elect a United States Senator hostile to the government and the administration, my actions will be determined by my convictions of duty." This is something like applying the antidote after the poison has had its effect and after the corpse has been lowered into its grave. It means simply this:—"If ex-President Johnson should be elected United States Senator in place of Fowler I, Parson Brownlow, his colleague, will shake hands with him, present his credentials and welcome him into the Senate Chamber, no matter what may have been our previous misunderstanding, and those who do not like it may say or do what they blessed please." With Andy Johnson and Parson Brownlow yoked in the same team and Ben Butler in a tandem rig of his own, the Senate Chamber during the sessions of 1871-72 is likely to prove the arena of extraordinary and piquant political controversies. Meanwhile the Senter men congratulate themselves that the lifting of the fog shows them to be, like the mystified mariner, in so eligible a position for a good land-fall, and declare that so far as their wing of the republicans of Tennessee is concerned the "brethren are satisfied."

Our Summer Resorts—The Clearing Out.

President Grant left Saratoga at six o'clock on Sunday evening and hastened to the bedside of his dying friend, Secretary Rawlins, at Washington. The sudden departure of the President will be followed, not only by that of all the place-hunters who have dogged his steps throughout the summer, but also by that of all the other more or less disinterested visitors to the once famous springs. The wintry weather which prevailed last week at Long Branch has dispersed nearly all the "summer boarders" at the Continental, the United States, the Metropolitan and the Stetson House. These houses closed yesterday for the season. Cape May has been burned out. Newport itself, and West Point, and all the other favorite summer resorts of New Yorkers will soon be abandoned by them. Preparations are, however, being already made for rendering these resorts still more attractive next year. "Marble halls" are in some of them to replace the vast wooden caravansaries which almost temptingly invite the incendiary's torch. But those who are so fortunate as to have enjoyed the delightful social freedom of the cottages at the watering places of Virginia and Alabama, as well as at Saratoga, will hardly believe that any amount of architectural splendor can compensate for the old fashioned privacy and comfort which will henceforth only recall pleasant but mournful memories.

It is noteworthy that while during the past season a larger proportion than ever of our city population has been absent, their usual summer resorts have been, with few exceptions, comparatively dull. The exorbitant charges of landlords and the indifference, not to say the insolence, of some of their subordinates, have conspired to drive many of our pleasure-seekers either to Europe or to quiet, secluded nooks in our own country. Not a few have availed themselves of the recently opened Pacific Railway to try a trip across the Continent. They have been amply rewarded by witnessing the novel glories of Rocky Mountain scenery. No doubt they will be followed by a yearly increasing number of adventurous tourists, and it will not be surprising if splendid hotels shall ere long be built for the accommodation of summer visitors from the Atlantic cities and from Europe to Pike's Peak, the Arkansas springs, Salt Lake City, the wonderful cañons of Colorado, the gold and silver districts in the Sierra Nevada, the Yosemite valley and the Pacific coast.

TROOPS FOR CUBA—A DOUBTFUL REPORT OF FOOLISH POLICY.—A telegram from Madrid says that four thousand troops are to sail on the 9th and 10th of this month for Cuba, and that six thousand more are to follow in a few days. We doubt this report, because negotiations are going on with the United States with a view to the independence of Cuba, and because Spain has neither the troops nor money to spare for such a Quixotic movement. The report may have got out through the government for the purpose of making a show of zeal, and to hurry up the United States to a bargain; but we have no idea that Spain will or can send ten thousand additional troops to Cuba. Should we be mistaken, however, and the Spanish government be foolish enough to spend so much money and sacrifice its soldiers in that way, the end must be the same—the independence of Cuba will be attained though the war should be prolonged. We hope the report is not true, and that the Spanish government will have the wisdom to accept the proposition of the United States for the settlement of the Cuban difficulty.

THE FIRE FIEND.—The losses by fire throughout the United States during the month of August, just passed, amounted to $6,438,000. This is a startling statement. The loss is nearly double that of August, 1868, and much exceeds the total of any month during the past or present year. The value of property destroyed by fire since January 1, 1869, already amounts to $27,100,000, while the total losses in 1868 were less than $35,000,000. The fire of August 5, in Philadelphia, when property valued at $4,000,000 was burned, was the most destructive one that has occurred in the country since July 4, 1866, when the city of Portland, Me., was devastated—the loss amounting to $10,000,000. The widespread drought has, of course, been one of the principal causes of this great destruction of property. In this connection New York has especial cause for thankfulness. The total loss by fire in this city during the month of August was less than $88,000, and at no one conflagration was property valued at $10,000 destroyed. So much for the blessings of our never-failing Croton and the efficiency of our Fire Department.

DEATH OF SECRETARY OF WAR RAWLINS.—Our telegraphic despatches from Washington report what had been so long anticipated, the death of General Rawlins. The sad event occurred at four o'clock yesterday evening. As our readers are aware, President Grant hurried from Saratoga in compliance with the wish expressed by the dying Secretary, and conveyed to him by telegraph, to see him before he died. This last wish, unhappily, could not be gratified, as the Secretary had expired before the President could reach Washington.

The Philadelphia Water Famine—A Remedy.

In the great distress of the Philadelphia people we have sent them one of our fire and wrecking steamers to help pump water from the Schuylkill into the Fairmount reservoir. She can do it at the rate of eight thousand gallons a minute, and thus relieve the turbine wheels for a little time, which are exhausting the waters that might be supplied to the city by working the machinery. If we had not two fire steamers on hand here we could not supply our Philadelphia brethren with the efficient aid of the John Fuller. In addition to furnishing the steamer we can furnish some good advice to the managers of the water works in Philadelphia, and that is to use steam engines in pumping water into the reservoirs instead of wasting thousands of gallons of water on their turbine wheels. There is an abundance of the fluid in Philadelphia, but as long as four-fifths or thereabouts of the Schuylkill river is used in turning the machinery employed to keep the reservoirs full, and then is permitted to run worthlessly to the sea, a water famine must be inevitable when a dry season comes. We are very kindly disposed towards our sedate representatives of brotherly love, but we cannot always spare them a fire steamer to keep them in cold water on an emergency like the present. And such a misfortune may come upon them at any time if they do not take our advice and economize their water for city purposes, by using steam engines for pumping it into the reservoirs. Coal is cheap in Pennsylvania. Recent events have proved to the residents of Philadelphia that it is cheaper than water.

Another Change in Postage Stamps.

It appears that another attempt is to be made in the fine art department of the General Post Office to give us a respectable, intelligible postage stamp. The present miserable experiments in blue, with a meaningless legend, are to be recalled, and something new, in red, is to be substituted. The old heads of Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Franklin and Lincoln are to be restored. It is about time that some definite form and design of postage stamp should be adopted, so that people may know to a certainty what mucilagated square of paper will carry a letter to its destination or what will not. If there is not genius enough in the Post Office Department to invent a good design, which may be permanent, let the authorities advertise for one. They will find plenty of people able to supply them; and when once adopted, let the new design remain in use. Every other country has been able to fix upon an intelligent postage stamp, recognizable all the world over. Can it be that the spirit of jobbery so prevails in our Post Office Department that we must have a new design every six months or thereabouts?

RIGHT AND PROPER—The abandonment by General Grant of his proposed visit to Senator Conkling's hospitalities at Utica and the General's immediate departure from Saratoga for the bedside of his dying Secretary of War in Washington, and the General's letter on the subject is that of the faithful friend and fellow soldier.

City Entertainments—Palmo.

Eighteen entertainments, more or less, musical or dramatic, are advertised in the HERALD, here at what seems almost midsummer for playgoers; and in the same number is announced the death of Ferdinand Palmo, the little, quiet, yellow, old man, whose youth and hope and enthusiasm had passed away many, many years before any of our present theatres, save only the Bowery, were built. How unmerciful disaster followed that altogether kindly spirit, who, blending the merchant and the artist—and a true Italian in both—mingled music and confectionery with such bewildering proportions in his career! How the buffet of fortune had softened him, too! Not that he was ever other than a gentle mannered man, as remembered by those who sipped coffee and played dominoes at his little marble tables and listened to the music that made his establishment, in all decent senses, a forerunner of the concert hall. Talking of his little marble tables, &c., how much better it might have been for morals and manners if refreshment establishments in our midst had, in their growth, taken the type of the café in Palmo's style rather than the type of the "bar" from the Western steamboat landing. This fire and fall back plan is just a test of who can stand longest his devotion to our social vice; but the other plan, bringing together men likely to have something to say, gave them a chance to say it, and wreathed the bowl with flowers of soul. Men of the right sort met at Palmo's. We wot of the time when a journalist of this town, who has lived to be famous as a maker of the most fearful jokes, sat at one of Palmo's tables and sipped his pleasant glass with two associates. One of the two was a fiddler in the orchestra, the other was the present Emperor of France.

Palmo cannot be compared to Columbus, although both were Italians, for he did not discover this country with respect to Italian opera. Nay, if we speak chronologically, he came even late in its history, for so brilliant a name as that of Maria Garcia goes nineteen years earlier in the story—goes with financial collapse, too, for even the power and splendor of the future Malibran in Desdemona and Cinderella did not prevent the failure of her father's venture to this barbaric shore. Could not all the wrecks with which that operatic coast was strewn have warned the speculative spirit of the caterer to more material tastes? He had a generous devotion in him, and some cool calculation, too. He had made fortunes enough to believe that he was albæ gallinæ filius, and, perhaps, he thought that he was to reap the harvest prepared by all those losses in their education of public taste. It was a fatal error to him, for his grand enterprise of the opera in Chambers street was his ruin; yet the city reaped some advantage in a handsome theatre. Its contemporaries were the Park, the National, or Chatham, the Bowery and the old Olympic—that is, Mitchell's. In those days there were still private residences in Wall street, and the elegant neighborhood of St. John's Park, now overlooked by Commodore Vanderbilt's brass hodge-podge, was the equivalent of the modern Murray Hill. People went to Vauxhall Garden in the Bowery on holidays, instead of going to Jones' Wood—Vauxhall Garden, in one corner of which now stands the Astor Library. There was another garden—yes, there was Niblo's. It was a monkey show then, too, and little boys peeped through the chinks of the board fence for a glimpse. It was long after that the Ravels flourished on that site in a real theatre. Of a Sunday evening you might see all New York promenading to the Battery down the west side of Broadway. Willis memorized some of the points of the promenade in one of his "city lyrics:"—

On up by St. Paul's and the Astor—
Religion seems very ill-planned,
For one day you list to the pastor,
For six days you list to the band.
The sermon may dwell on the future,
The organ your pulses may calm,
When pest, that remembered cachucha,
Upsets both the sermon and psalm.

Yes, the "Cachucha," for Fanny Elssler was having greater success in the introduction of her art than Palmo in his. But, then, was she not advised by the chivalric Wikoff, whose rare tact told how to coach the public taste?

Palmo's theatre became better known to the public as Burton's, and Burton, old Blake, George Holland, John Brougham and others passed away, and still remaining lights blazed there. It begot a host of successors. One of the more splendid of these was also built for the Italian opera. Its walls now enclose the Mercantile Library—Macready's playing there was the occasion of the Astor Place riot; and we could give the name of another journalist who was gamin enough to creep through the hole that the mob battered in the Eighth street door, and who consequently saw the play as Daniel did the lions—without its costing him a cent. How many theatres came up among us and went down, too, during the old age of our little impresario. What mushrooms they are—these theatres! Fancy some one telling Palmo, then in Chambers street, that twenty-five years later a man would build an immensely finer opera house than his on the corner of Twenty-third street and Eighth avenue, and that it would be one of thirty theatres in the city. How he would have laughed—a little, quiet, gentle laugh. It is the ignis fatuus of theatrical capitalists, this Italian opera, for that out-of-town one is a failure, too. Failure goes through the chapter. One man was likely to enrich himself, but he linked his fortunes in an evil hour with the great humbugger, and he is gone too.

ATTORNEY GENERAL HOAR'S OPINION.—This opinion touching the new Virginia Legislature simply means that without any test oath the two houses may meet and ratify the fifteenth amendment; but that beyond that they can do nothing without the test oath till recognized by Congress. In other words, the administration, for the sake of the fifteenth amendment, accepts this Virginia Legislature without exacting the test oath, and leaves the responsibility for all the rest and the loss of the amendment with Congress. A nice question.

SOMEWHAT UNFORTUNATE—The illness of his charming wife, in consequence of which Vice President Colfax is detained among the Yosemite cliffs and chasms of California. These scenes are among the most wonderful in the world, but they are too far away from "the white settlements" to be admired by a sick woman. We hope soon to hear, however, that Mrs. Colfax is out again and, with Mr. Colfax, on her way rejoicing.

NOTES ABOUT TOWN.

Statistics show that milk sold in the city is not watered by wholesale but by retail dealers. By retail is quite sufficient. Talking of milk, now that the Philadelphians have made a requisition on New York for a steam pump to raise water from the Schuylkill into the Fairmount reservoir, the question is how will that fact affect the price and quality of the lacteal in the Quaker City?

A lady correspondent inquires of our fashionable modistes what our fashions correspondent, writing from Baden, means by saying that the "travelling suits for autumn are almond and maroon Scotch plaid with shawl fringe all round?" In ignorance of its real meaning the conclusion is that the lady tourists must look charming in their queer suits.

Our city hotels are crowded with birds of passage from the summer resorts in the mountains to their warm and comfortable homes in more moderate latitudes. Being caught in a snow storm in a summer toilet, as has lately been the case in the White Mountains, is scarcely a pleasurable feature in the programme of summer recreations.

The board fence around the new Post Office site is being rapidly placarded over, the owner of Dexter taking the most conspicuous places. By the way, suppose the Common Council ring, not having had a finger in this job, should order the fence to be taken down, would the lessee, who has paid $15,000 for the exclusive privilege of posting bills upon it, suffer thereby, or could he fall back upon the federal government? Here is a chance for small lawyers to overhaul their Blackstones.

Some of the little vagabonds running about the streets, fair candidates for the bottomless pit, pick up a nice little sum by gathering peach stones and stringing the pits, which they sell to the druggists for a few coppers per hundred. We have no statistics as to the number of "poor widowed mothers"—old song—whose necessities the little rascals relieve, but rather think the bulk of the proceeds goes for pit tickets to our cheap places of amusement.

While our Philadelphia cousins are complaining of a scarcity of water the Germans here are complaining of a scarcity of lager. There will be plenty of the latter about election time, especially if the cry among the Germans shall be "Co-hin to win," the meaning of which is, and an explanation may be necessary in order to make it clear to obtuse comprehensions, if Jacob Cohen shall be a candidate for Supervisor.

Here is a question put by an observing lady residing on Fifth avenue which may be interesting to the belles of the Dominion of Canada:—Are the scarlet jackets now so much worn by young ladies a dodge to catch the eye of young Prince Arthur? They so much resemble the uniform of the English army that it looks very much like it.

THE ACCIDENT IN THE BAY.

Safety of the Persons Supposed to Have Been Lost.

Quite a sensation was occasioned yesterday by the report in the morning papers of the capsizing of a sailboat in the bay, off Fort Richmond, on Sunday, and the probable drowning of six or seven persons. The facts in the case are that a party of gentlemen consisting of Messrs. Arthur Swartout, Samuel Walker, John Walker, William Hicks and Thomas Lynch, while out on the bay in a small sailboat, were capsized by a flaw of wind, and after being nearly an hour in the water clinging to the boat were rescued by a boat from shore, the only injuries sustained consisting of a thorough wetting, and slight colds to some of the party. The capsized boat was picked up by the harbor police and brought to New York, as before stated.

A NEW THEATRICAL "EFFECT."

Mr. J. Henry Magonigle, of Booth's theatre, accused Thomas McCready, a former employé of Edwin Booth, at the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday, with having maliciously injured the stage and scenery of that establishment. McCready had been discharged some time since from the theatre, and, it seems, nourished resentment against the chief carpenter. Getting drunk on Sunday, he obtained an entrance into the theatre from the Sixth avenue, through a side door, and thence to the stage. Advancing to the "fire butt" he turned on the faucet and let the water on the stage, injuring the scenery and effects. Patrick J. Golding, one of the watchmen, heard the noise, and rushing up on the stage stopped the water. McCready was arrested soon after in the street by an officer. He was committed in default of $800 bail.

The condition of Napoleon's health commands universal attention. Arrival of Supposed Convicts and Pauper Immigrants at Baltimore.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 6, 1869.

Some time since Governor Bowie received from the State Department at Washington a communication which had been forwarded there by the Commissioner of Emigration at New York, to the effect that seven convicts and paupers had sailed from Bremen for the United States, their passage being paid by the government. The original information was said to have come from the United States Consul at Bremen, with the names and descriptions of the men and the vessel in which they embarked—the North German bark Atlanta, bound for this port. The Atlanta arrived on Saturday and was boarded by Deputy Marshal Gray. On examining the passenger list six of the seven names were found thereon, and the men were placed under arrest. Four of them are brothers, named Hoffman, all married, with children. They all denied the allegation that either of them had ever been a pauper or a convict, averring that they left Germany for the purpose of settling in the West. All had a large amount of personal effects. The man particularly designated in the Bremen communication as a pauper displayed a belt well filled with gold about his person. Each had a regular set of papers made out and signed by the German authorities. An examination of the case was held this morning by Justice Haggerty, which resulted in the prompt discharge from custody of all the parties. It is stated that, from facts elicited on the examination, it appeared that the arrests were instigated by a rival emigrant line in New York, who caused a despatch to be forwarded from Boston indicating these emigrants as paupers.

The Volunteer Movement Among the Foreign Residents—Offer of Aid to General de Rodas—Volunteers Repulsed Near Puerto Principe—Severe Fight Near Las Tunas.

HAVANA, Sept. 6, 1869.

The foreign residents of this city, principally the Germans, are enlisting to act as a volunteer reserve battalion when the present volunteers take the field. The foreigners this morning presented a letter to Captain General de Rodas, containing the above offer, and it was accepted by him.

Eight hundred insurgents surprised 400 volunteers five miles from Puerto Principe and repulsed them. General Puello, with 400 troops, marched to the assistance of the volunteers, but the insurgents refused to give battle.

On the 16th of August the insurgents, several thousand strong, commanded by General Quesada, General Cespedes being present, made an attack on Las Tunas, losing 250 killed. The garrison of Las Tunas consisted of 450 troops, of which 100 were killed and wounded. The fight lasted nine hours. The result is not stated. General Benegasi arrived at Las Tuñas the day afterwards, with a convoy. He had skirmishing all along his road, and sustained a slight loss.

Great Fire in Richmond—The Old Burnt District Reburning—Loss $175,000.

RICHMOND, Sept. 6, 1869.

The fire to-night was the most destructive that has occurred here since the great conflagration of April 1865. It occurred on a portion of the burned district which had been rebuilt, between Cary, Main and Fifteenth streets, and occupied the entire interior of the square. A large lumber yard first took fire, and all the buildings on Cary street, in the direction of which the wind carried the flames, followed. Then the newly built stores on the corner of Fifteenth and Cary streets caught and the devouring element was for a while raging with power. The Fire Department exhibited an incompetency that was surprising in a metropolis, and but for this an immense amount of property would have been saved. At about twelve, midnight, the fire had consumed nearly everything combustible in its vicinity and the flames began to subside in some degree, but it still raged with terrific force.

The lumber yard belonging to the firm of Cardwell & Co., Massey & Harvey's building, Board & Hirsh's, Charles Haward's, J. W. Cardwell's and two new vacant stores have been destroyed. Every square around is filled with people and property scattered in every direction. The store on Fifteenth street, occupied by H. Wallerstein & Co., must burn and a number of buildings near it will suffer to a large extent. The whole destruction of property, both real and personal, is estimated at $175,000, of which about $30,000 is insured in New York companies, and as far as now known about $5,000 in a Richmond company. The lumber, which made the greatest portion of the fire, was valued at about $50,000. The glare was grand, the country being illuminated for miles.

Wreck of the Bark Ezra on Body's Island—Six Lives Lost.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6, 1869.

The following is from Richmond:—

There is another marine disaster reported at Norfolk. On Tuesday night last the Ezra, bound from Liverpool to Baltimore, went ashore on the north end of Body's Island. A heavy sea was running at the time of the disaster, but the ship being closely reefed was not making more than five or six knots an hour. The captain had given orders to take the soundings at twelve, midnight, but the vessel grounded among the breakers at eleven P. M. The second mate was on watch; but, having been taken sick, he went below, leaving the vessel in charge of a seaman, with orders to call the captain if necessary. She had drifted southerly far out of her course, and when she struck on the outer bar of the island the greatest confusion occurred on board. All the boats were at once hoisted out and all hands abandoned the ship, which they expected would soon go to pieces among the breakers. In the endeavor to cross these two of the boats, containing Captain Harless, his wife and the first mate, two seamen, named Peter Hanson and Peter Williamson, and a boy, in all six persons, were lost. The other boats with the remainder of the ship's crew were successful in reaching the shore, and they at once sent news of the wreck to Norfolk. A wrecking vessel was at once despatched to the assistance of the ship, which it is thought will be a total loss. She left Norfolk about four months since for Liverpool and was on her return trip with an assorted cargo.

ASSASSINATION IN PHILADELPHIA.

A Revenue Officer Shot by Two Men in a Store on Front Street at Noon Yesterday—Escape of the Assassins.

[From the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, Sept. 6.]

The boldest attempt at assassination ever made in this city took place shortly after noon to-day. Revenue Officer James J. Brooks, at half-past twelve o'clock, entered the liquor store of Mr. Keenan, on Front street, below Arch, and was holding a conversation with the son of Mr. Keenan, when two men came into the place and commenced talking with the lad. They asked if Mr. Keenan was in, and on being told that he was not, they turned to leave. During the interview Mr. Brooks was standing with his right side towards them. One of the scoundrels drew a revolver, and aiming it at Mr. Brooks, pulled the trigger, the ball passing in under Mr. Brooks' right shoulder blade and lodging somewhere in his chest. The assassinators immediately ran out of the store and jumped into a cab, the driver of which plied the whip and the horses started on a full jump. Up Front street they went to Callowhill, and along Callowhill to St. John, and up that street. On Callowhill street detectives Franklin and Tyron were standing, and noticing the immoderate speed of the animals, called to the driver to pull up. They did not at that time know of the occurrence. The driver slackened a little, and turned into St. John street. Noticing an immense crowd coming out of Front street, detective Tyron immediately turned and followed after the cab, while Franklin ran down Callowhill street to Front, and down that thoroughfare to the store of Mr. Keenan, where he found Mr. Brooks lying in a critical situation. Obtaining assistance, he conveyed the wounded man to his residence, on Fourth street, above Spruce, where physicians were called in. Fears are entertained that he will die, as hemorrhages have already set in.

Mr. Brooks did not know either of the men who assassinated him, but there is scarcely any doubt that they are in some way or other connected with the illicit whiskey dealers, to whom Mr. Brooks has caused considerable trouble during the past several years.

No news has up to this time been heard from Detective Tyron, but there is scarcely a possibility of their escaping, as the cab was being driven at a frightful speed up St. John street, causing the greatest commotion among the residents living on that street.

A Reward of Five Thousand Dollars Offered for the Arrest and Conviction of the Assassins.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 6—6 P. M.

United States District Attorney Valentine states that a reward of $5,000 will be paid for the arrest and conviction of the assassins of Revenue Officer Brooks.

The parties were pursued as far as Fairmount Park, where they were lost sight of. It is believed the deed was committed by hired assassins. Mr. Brooks was unable to recognize his assailants.

Mr. Brooks was appointed a government detective to prevent illicit distillation, and the assault was undoubtedly in revenge of his successful efforts in detecting frauds.

General Gregory, the United States Marshal, has directed his officers to take steps for the arrest of the assassins.

Mr. Brooks is still alive, but the nature of his wound renders his condition critical.

Light rains commenced falling in Wilmington, S. C., last evening, with a fair prospect of a settled rain storm. The drought has done great damage to the lower part of the State.

TERRIBLE CALAMITY.

Fire in a Coal Mine at Plymouth, Pa.

Over Two Hundred Persons in the Mine Suffocated.

SCRANTON, Pa., Sept. 6, 1869.

There is great excitement here in consequence of the burning of a "coal breaker" at the Avondale mine, in Plymouth, about twenty miles south of this city. There are 201 men and boys in the mine, and the shaft, which is their only means for escape, is choked by forty feet of burning coal and rubbish. Ventilation is totally stopped, and there are great fears that some, if not all, will be suffocated.

Second Despatch.

PLYMOUTH, Pa., Sept. 6, 1869.

A fire broke out this morning in the flue in the bottom of the Steuben shaft, owned by the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad Company in this place, and in a short time the whole breaker and outbuildings were in flames, and the hoisting apparatus, the only avenue of escape for the miners destroyed. All efforts to stay the flames were in vain and the whole structure fell, partly filling up the shaft.

Over two hundred men are in the shaft and have no communication out, with no chance for air, as the only way for getting air into the shaft was through the main opening and that was filled with the burning timbers and débris. It is feared that the whole number have been suffocated by the smoke or perished for want of air.

The fire departments of Scranton, Wilkesbarre and Kingston are on hand, and are playing streams down the shaft for the purpose of quenching the fire there so the rubbish can be cleared out and the condition of the men ascertained. It will probably take till to-morrow morning before any tidings can be received from them.

The scene at the shaft is heart-rending. The families of the miners are congregated there in great numbers. Miners from all parts of the country are there at work, and merchants, and in fact the whole population of the town have turned out to assist.

The loss by fire will amount to about $100,000, partly covered by insurance.

All the physicians of the vicinity have been summoned to attend when the condition of the men is ascertained.

The affair has cast a gloom upon the whole community and business is almost entirely suspended. The mines only resumed work to-day after a suspension of about three months.

Among the men in the mines is Mr. Hughes, the superintendent.

Particulars of the Disaster—How the Fire Originated—The Shaft Cleared—Death of Two Men Who Descended Into the Mine—No Hopes Entertained for Those in the Mine.

SCRANTON, Sept. 6, 1869.

The fire began at ten o'clock this morning. All reports agree it must have communicated from the ventilating furnace to the woodwork at the bottom of the shaft, which is 327 feet below the surface. The flames then rushed with great violence up the shaft and broke out in the engine room at the top. The engineer barely escaped with his life. The buildings covering the mouth of the shaft were 100 feet high and 200 feet long, all of wood and dry as tinder. They were almost instantly enveloped in flames, and it was impossible to reach the mouth of the shaft to help the men below.

At half-past eleven in the morning a relief train started from this city for the scene with Superintendent Storrs in charge and a steam fire engine on board. When the train arrived the buildings were burned to the ground and the mouth of the shaft choked forty feet deep with burning timbers, coal fallen from the pockets, &c. An engine from Kingston and one from Wilkesbarre were on the ground, but water was scarce and the location different, being high up on a very steep hill side. The work of quenching the fire and clearing the shaft consumed some hours, and in the meanwhile thousands of people gathered from the surrounding country. The families of the men in the pit were soon present, and their cries were heartrending in the extreme.

At fifty minutes past five o'clock a dog and lamp were sent down in a basket to test the air, and were brought back the dog alive and lamp burning. In five minutes immediate preparations were made to descend the shaft, and thirty-four minutes after six o'clock a man went down in a bucket, and in seven minutes returded and reported no difficulty in breathing, but obstructions halyway down that he could not pass.

At ten minutes to seven o'clock two men were sent down in a bucket with tools. They removed the obstructions and reached the bottom of the shaft at a quarter-past seven o'clock. They reported that they had penetrated a gangway sixty or seventy yards, finding three dead mules, and reaching a closed door, at which they battered so lustily that their blows were heard above ground, but got no response and discovered no signs of life. Clouds of sulphurous gases were pouring out through the door, yet they could breathe without very much difficulty.

The clouds of sulphurous gases mentioned as pouring through the gangway door to which the first men down had penetrated, must have filled that part of the mine around the foot of the shaft, if not all of it.

Despatches just received from Avondale say that Thomas W. Williams, of Plymouth, and David Jones, of Grand Tunnel, who went down to make further investigations, were suffocated to death. On a second attempt Williams' dead body was brought out by David H. Davis and Benjamin Jones. Thomas Williams went down and dragged David Jones some distance to the foot of the shaft, when he was compelled to come up. John W. and Isaac Thomas then went down and brought up the body. All who attempted to go down are now out alive except Williams and Jones.

No further attempt will be made to go down until a small engine is rigged to drive a fan at the mouth of the shaft and force air in through a canvass hose. This will take until five o'clock A. M. All who have been down say it is very hot, and loud calls have failed to elicit an answer.

The only hope for the 202 men in the mine is that they may have shut themselves in a remote part of the workings, entirely away from the draft.

Several hundred men with tools were taken from here this evening with the idea of driving a gangway from a neighboring mine into the Avondale workings but as it must be solid rock cutting this means would probably not relieve the imprisoned men in time.

The distance to be cut is variously estimated at from twenty to sixty feet, and the time required, two or three days.

It has been feared that the ventilating furnace at Avondale would some day fire the shaft, as it was a very dry mine. The danger to life is very great in a mine which has but one means of entrance and exit. It is thought that Avondale is but one of many mines in the same condition. It is to be hoped that the next Legislature will not, as so many previous ones have done, refuse to pass a stringent law for the protection of miners and inspection of mines.

The loss by the burning of the Avondale mine works to-day is from $80,000 to $100,000, not counting the loss by the stoppage of mining. This mine had been involved in a strike for over three months, but had resumed work last Thursday and was producing 450 tons of coal per day. The works were built in 1867 and it will take four to six months to rebuild them.

The State Senatorship in the Northumberland District.

NORTHUMBERLAND, Sept. 6, 1869.

The contest for the democratic nomination for State Senator for the district composed of Northumberland, Montour, Sullivan and Columbia counties has been very lively. Immediately on the result being announced Withington, of Northumberland, who had been voting for Chalfant on that and previous ballots, wished to reconsider his vote. A stormy time ensued, and Chalfant and his delegates left in disgust; after which the remaining delegates nominated Charles R. Buckalew.

DEATH OF EX-GOVERNOR WORTH, OF NORTH CAROLINA.

A despatch from Raleigh announces the death in that city on Sunday night of ex-Governor Jonathan Worth, of North Carolina. He first attained to national prominence after the close of the rebellion and under the reconstruction policy of President Johnson. Previous to that time, however, he had been for a long number of years well known in the State as a whig politician and a warm opponent of all the political theories of Mr. Calhoun. He served for numerous terms in the Legislature of North Carolina, and as far back as 1831 introduced a resolution in the House of Commons denouncing the doctrine of nullification. When the secession movement began he opposed it with rigor, voting against the bill providing for the calling of a convention to take North Carolina out of the Union. After the rebellion broke out he retired to his home, keeping aloof from politics, and retaining undimmed by the exciting events surrounding him, all of his devotion to the Union. He never could be prevailed upon to give any active support to the Confederate cause, although it must be admitted that he took no part against the South. The termination of the war brought him again before the public in the character of a candidate for office. Mr. Holden had been appointed Provisional Governor and Mr. Worth Provisional State Treasurer. Both became candidates for the chief magistracy of the State under the permanent government. The antecedents of Mr. Holden was distasteful to an overwhelming majority of the white voters of North Carolina, not because he claimed to be a Unionist—for Mr. Worth was in every respect a truer friend of the republic than his competitor—but because of the manner in which Mr. Holden assisted his claims to an election. The result was that the deceased gentleman was elected by a great majority. He took the oath of office in December, 1865, and served until under the Congressional plan of reconstruction the negro vote of the State elected Mr. Holden to the position he now occupies. Since then Mr. Worth had lived in retirement. He was somewhat advanced in years, was a gentleman of the old school, and was highly esteemed in North Carolina.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

MONDAY, Sept. 6—6 P. M.

The activity and excitement which set in last week in the Gold Room became more widespread to-day, and the Stock Exchange participated in the ferment, which seems to have been engendered by the gold speculators and threatens to visit all branches of business in Wall street. The animation of the forenoon was brought about by a direct renewal of the "bull" movement in gold, under which the price was carried to 137⅜. At the same time the general situation was invaded by apprehensions arising out of the bad news from the Paris Bourse, where rentes went down to 69.85 and great excitement prevailed. Indeed, one despatch announced that the presiding officer of the Bourse found it necessary to state publicly that the health of the Emperor was "satisfactory," upon which there was a recovery in prices, but with continued uneasiness. Use of this intelligence was made by the "bulls," and large numbers of the "shorts" were frightened into covering. Soon after midday a prominent firm threw two millions of gold upon the market and the price broke almost instantly to 136⅝. When they ceased selling, the operation requiring only a few minutes, there was an immediate return of the price to 137⅛, the great gulf of the "bull" speculation seeming to close over and bury out of sight this latest effort of the "bears." It was reported, however, that these sales were but a repetition of the trick of Saturday, when several large firms were betrayed into going short for large sums on their own account, because they had received orders from the "bulls" to sell, and suspected the movement of the latter had culminated. The "bulls" smile at the agony of the "bears," and threaten that when they can no longer put up the price they will advance the borrowing rate to figures which will force the shorts to cover. It remains to be seen how far they will be successful in thus controlling the market. Indeed, many suspect that they have already commenced to unload. The trick of giving orders to brokers to sell will be repeated, perhaps, until the street gets used to it and discredits every time that it is the beginning of the unloading. Then the clique will really unload and the street will give no heed to the oft-repeated cry of "wolf!" As to the story that the government will help the gamblers for the purpose of offsetting the Pendletonian greenback clamor of the West, it is of the same tissue as all the stories started in the Gold Room. It may or may not be true. The cliques may "corner" gold for a few weeks; but the merchants have no need of it, as they have or ought to have closed out their debts on imports long ago, and hence the only legitimate demand for it is gone. The balance of trade is very slightly against us, so much so that when we come to export our cotton and grain we shall have to import gold in payment for them. The cliques know this. They enjoy their power now because the "bears" are so numerous, and thereby create an unhealthy and unnatural demand for the metal. They are forcing the price to a good point from which to drop. Then they will themselves turn "bears," and an avalanche of sales will carry gold below 130. Meantime we must take the situation as we find it, and it is certainly very flattering to the skill and boldness of the "bulls." The range of the price is shown in the table:—

10 A. M.	137	1 P. M.	137⅛
11 A. M.	137⅛	2 P. M.	137⅛
12 M.	137⅛	3 P. M.	137⅛
12:04 P. M.	137⅛	4 P. M.	137⅛
12:27 P. M.	136⅝	5 P. M.	137⅛
12:36 P. M.	137⅛	5:30 P. M.	137 a 137⅛

The demand for cash gold was quite variable, showing the policy of fast and loose which the cliques are playing with the market. In the morning the rate ranged from 1-64 for borrowing to 6 per cent for carrying, and after Clearing House from 7 to 2 per cent for carrying. The disbursements of coin interest to-day amounted to $116,701 75. At the Gold Exchange Bank the gross clearances again amounted to an enormous figure, viz:—$192,229,000; the gold balances to $2,842,815, and the currency balances to $4,236,129. The imports of specie at this port last week were as follows:—

Sept. 2.—Steamer City of Washington, Liverpool—Gold dust	$145
Sept. 2.—Steamer Alaska, Aspinwall—Gold dust	8,300
Gold	3,035
Silver	4,905
Total for the week	$11,008
Previously reported	9,835,856
Total since January 1, 1869	$9,847,241
Same time, 1868	5,529,784
Same time, 1867	2,226,175

The easier condition of the banks at the close last week allayed the apprehensions of borrowers for the money market this week, and hence there was a general deferment of engagements until late in the day, when under the combined demand and as an echo to the uneasiness in London and Paris there was sudden activity and the rate on call was sharp seven per cent, particularly on mixed collaterals. Government bonds were supplied at six to seven. Commercial paper was in somewhat better request, but rates ranged as formerly quoted, viz.:—From nine to twelve per cent. Lenders are getting into the habit more generally of making time loans on collaterals for periods ranging from thirty to ninety days, at the full legal rate, the broker making his own terms as to the commission. This class of transactions checks, to some extent, the negotiation of paper, and is now preferred by many lenders. As to the course of the money market in the ensuing few weeks much speculation is indulged in, but the impression is general that it will require artificial means to render it active to stringency. The demand from the West and South must come sooner or later, but the expectation of it is so largely discounted that the market will doubtless glide to tightness almost imperceptibly. The "bear" cliques are reported to have got together to-day to organize a pool for the withdrawal of $5,000,000 of greenbacks from circulation, and thus precipitate a break in stocks, bonds and gold. Those who claim to speak from a knowledge of Secretary Boutwell's policy say that while on the one hand he will endeavor to market our crops to Europe at the most remunerative prices he will keep our local money market well supplied with currency for the promotion of our metropolitan business.

The foreign exchange market was a shade firmer at the close, not from any better demand, but through a sudden indisposition on the part of drawers to make more bills. Rates were nominal, the extreme range for sterling and francs being as follows:—Sterling, sixty days, commercial, 107 a 107¾; good to prime bankers', 108 a 108½; short sight, 108½ a 109; francs, long and short, 5.27½ a 5.18¾.

The following were the bids for the city bank stocks at the board this morning:—New York, 135; Manhattan, 140; Merchants', 125; Mechanics', 140; Union, 128; America, 142; City, 200; Phenix, 109½; North River, 90; Butchers' and Drovers', 135; Seventh Ward, 114; State of New York, 111; Commerce, 126; Ocean, 100; American Exchange, 116½; Chatham, 165; Bank of the Republic, 118; Bank of North America, 109½; Irving, 112; Metropolitan, 137; People's, 140; Market, 124; Nassau, 106; Corn Exchange, 132; Continental, 100; Importers and Traders', 140; Park, 170; Manufacturers' and Merchants', 100; Central National, 111; Fourth National, 105; Ninth National, 113.

The effect of the foreign news upon government securities was witnessed in their rather sharp decline in the home market. The 62's went off to 122¼ and the 67's to 120⅞. It is suspected that the Jewish holiday of New Years was taken advantage of in Frankfort to depress the market there in the interest of houses having American connection and interested in both gold and bonds. Certain it is that the decline in Frankfort was much greater than in London, the Exchange of which city is more phlegmatic and less susceptible to violent speculative movements. The 67's in the latter place went off only to 81, the decline being only one-half as much as in the German city. The yielding here was a large one, however, when it is considered that the market should have been sustained by purchases which were made on foreign account early in the day before the "break" abroad and when gold was at 137⅛ a 137⅜, the double transaction of selling the bonds in London and the gold here affording a good margin of profit. The following were the closing street prices this evening, the market being steady:—United States sixes, 1881, registered, 122¼ a 122½; do. do., coupon, 122¼ a 122½; do. five-twenties, registered, 121¾ a 122; do. do., coupon, 1862, 122¼ a 122⅜; do. do., coupon, 1864, 121¾ a 122; do. do., coupon, 1865, 121¾ a 122; do. do., coupon, new, 1865, 120⅛ a 120¼; do. do., coupon, 1867, 120⅜ a 120½; do. do., coupon, 1868, 120⅛ a 120¾; do. ten-forties, registered, 111 a 111⅛; do. do., coupon, 111⅛ a 111⅛; currency bonds, 110⅛ a 110⅜.

The speculative interest being diverted in other directions Southern securities were dull and generally steady. The new North Carolinas were weak and lower, and the new South Carolinas active and higher. Otherwise there was no feature in the market. The following were the closing prices at the last session of the board:—Tennessee, ex coupon, 60½ a 63; do. new, 52 bid; Virginia, ex coupon, 55½ a 57; do. new, 58 a 59; Georgia sevens, 91¾ a 92; North Carolina, ex coupon, 55½ a 56; do., new, 47½ a 47¾; Missouri sixes, 87 a 87½; do., St. Joseph, 90 a 92; South Carolina, new, 67 a 69; Louisiana sixes, 70 a 70¾; do., levee sixes, 65 a 66½; do., do. eights, 84 a 84½.

The stock market was barely steady at the opening, despite the favorable bank statement of last week, and was therefore easily susceptible of the "bear" attack which was made upon it later in the day, subsequent to the reports of uneasiness in Europe and the more active closing of our home money market. The railway list yielded quite easily to this hammering, excepting New York Central, which was very strong at the decline to 203¾, its lowest point, and reacted whenever the sellers left the market. Erie, in sympathy with a yielding in the London price, went off to 33½. Pittsburg, which sold as high as 109⅛ on renewed reports of a stock dividend, also went off in the afternoon. The stocks more particularly "hammered" were Rock Island, which sold down to 112½, the report being circulated that the directors would not declare a dividend; Michigan Southern, which touched 102⅜, and the Northwestern and St. Paul stocks. These were the features of the "break." A rally took place towards the closing of the Long Room; but in subsequent street transactions prices again fell off. The following were the closing quotations at the last session of the Stock Exchange:—Canton, 31 a 38; Cumberland, 51 a 58; Western Union, 37⅛ bid; Quicksilver, 14⅛ a 15⅛; Mariposa, 7 a 8½; Mariposa preferred, 12 a 16; Pacific Mail, 80⅝ a 80⅝; Boston Water Power, 15 a 15½; Adams Express, 57⅛ a 57⅛; Wells, Fargo & Co.'s Express, 18 a 19⅛; American Express, 36 bid; United States Express, 62½ a 62¾; New York Central, 204⅛ a 204½; Hudson River, 183 a 184; Harlem, 159 bid; Reading, 96⅝ a 96⅞; Michigan Central, 129 a 131; Lake Shore, 103⅛ a 103⅛; Illinois Central, 137⅛ a 139; Cleveland and Pittsburg, 108⅛ a 108⅜; Chicago and Northwestern, 81⅝ a 81¾; do. preferred, 90⅝ a 91; Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati, 77⅛ a 80; Rock Island, 113⅛ a 113⅛; Milwaukee and St. Paul, 78⅜ a 78½; do. preferred, 87⅛ a 87⅜; Toledo and Wabash, 80⅛ a 81⅛; do. preferred, 81 a 85; Fort Wayne, 87 a 87⅛; Alton and Terre Haute, 33½ a 35; do. preferred, 57⅛ a 58⅛; Ohio and Mississippi, 31⅞; Delaware and Lackawanna, 112⅛ a 113; New Jersey Central, 105⅛ a 105⅝; Chicago and Alton, 151½ a 152; do. preferred, 150 a 154; Morris and Essex, 88⅛ a 88⅞; Hannibal and St. Joseph, 123 a 125; do. preferred, 120⅛ a 123; Columbus, Chicago and Indiana Central, 33⅛ a 35.

—The wheat market was irregular and dull. The continued favorable tenor of the European advices and the advance in gold were offset by the deadlock in the exchange market, so that there was almost no demand for export, and prices were 3c. a 5c. lower for spring wheat, the market closing quiet but steady for amber winter at $1 57 a $1 60, and dull and nominal for spring at $1 45 a $1 50 bid, according to condition. The sales comprised about 100,000 bushels, at $1 45 a $1 47 for fair No. 2 spring, $1 57 a $1 62 for red and amber Western, $1 78 for California, $1 62 a $1 63½ for smutty white Kentucky, $1 65 a $1 67 for white Michigan, $1 62 a $1 65 for amber Southern and $1 63 a $1 67 for white do. For No. 1 spring $1 56 was bid and $1 58 a $1 60 asked. Corn was scarce and decidedly higher. The sales were 45,000 bushels at $1 16 a $1 23 for new mixed Western, $1 24 a $1 25 for white and yellow do. and $1 27 a $1 30 for white Southern. Oats were quiet, the demand being light, but prices were firm. The sales were about 25,000 bushels at 65c. a 70c. Rye was heavy, with small sales at $1 17 a $1 18 for State and Western. Barley and barley malt were dull but unchanged.

RIOT, MURDER AND ARSON IN VIRGINIA.

Bloody Fight Between Whites and Blacks—A Black Man Killed—Several Wounded—Hotel Burned—Great Excitement.

[From the Newtown (Md.) Gazette, September 4.]

The 30th ult. was the commencement of what is usually termed the "August Court" for Accomack county, Va., and, we regret to say, was also the scene of riot and murder, and terminating in arson—reducing to ashes the large hotel occupied by Henry Overton, and the surrounding buildings, and also the store house and contiguous two story residence belonging to Dr. Edward J. Young.

On the occasion of every August Court a dense concourse of people, both white and black, assemble at the county seat, irrespective of business, age or condition in life; and on last Monday the crowd, all told, must have numbered at least 2,000, for every street and vacant lot in the vicinity of the Court House was a moving mass of human beings.

Notwithstanding the dense crowd everything was passing off in quiet and harmony, and the citizens, having experienced some trouble in August, 1868, were felicitating themselves on the good order which existed among the white and the colored population. But sometime between four and six P. M. bad whiskey and sour cider began to develop their pernicious effects upon the brains of a set of young, irresponsible country boys, ranging in age from fifteen to twenty years, who imprudently went in among the negroes, who had selected an unoccupied square opposite the Court House, where they might enjoy themselves in their own way, without molesting or being molested; and while the boys were mixing in with the negroes some difficulty occurred, and a negro woman was seen to have a revolver and a knife, when one of the boys, not over sixteen, thought himself particularly called upon to take the pistol from her, and in the act of so doing—the woman, of course, resisting—he got one of his hands severely cut, and when we saw him wending his way to Dr. Wise's office, his hand and arm were as bloody as though he had dipped both into a tub of blood. This was the signal for, seemingly, a general row. The word was handed around that a "negro woman had cut a white boy," when a number of indiscreet young men, all hailing from the country, made a general attack upon the negroes, and one young man by the name of Marshall, in the general scramble, was pierced through the side with a knife by a negro man named Jacob Guy. Jake was singled out and pursued, and chastised at every step by some one of the party, while another fired upon him with a revolver. The ball took effect between the knee and groin, passing clear through the leg, severing in its passage the femoral artery. There being no bone broken the negro was still able to retreat into the store of Colburn & Co., passing from thence into the street and over the fence into the Court House yard, where he fell from the loss of blood. The wound was examined and the blood stayed by Dr. Fitzhue, who pronounced the chances of life against the negro—and we here add, being an eye witness, that while the Doctor was engaged in his examination Jake's guilt was established of having stabbed young Marshall, by the finding of a bloody knife, some twelve inches long, upon his person. The negro's wife was soon on the spot, a cart was procured, and she started home with him; but he died on the way. A coroner's inquest was not held until Wednesday, when a verdict in accordance with the facts and circumstances was rendered.

While this tragedy was being enacted in one part of the town, another of a less magnitude was going on elsewhere, which resulted in the beating of a negro who had drawn either a knife or a pistol on a white man. The negro, however, would have been killed had not a few gentlemen of influence of the village promptly went to his relief. In almost one short hour from the commencement of this terrible affair, the town was as quiet as a Sabbath morning. A general stampede took possession of the negroes, men and women alike, and scarcely one was to be seen on the streets at seven o'clock. Presuming all to be quiet in and around the village, and fearing no other outbreak, the citizens, without even so much as taking the precautionary measure of organizing a night watch, retired to rest. But they were aroused at about three A. M. by the ringing of bells and the cry of "fire." In the darkness and still of night the incendiary applied the torch to the above mentioned hotel, and it, together with the store house and the dwelling, were soon a heap of ruins. The wind being favorable the incendiary, no doubt, contemplated destruction of the entire town; but the storehouse and dwelling were scarcely enveloped in the devouring element ere the wind changed to almost an opposite direction, forcing both heat and flame from off the court house, Clerk's office and adjacent attorneys' offices, thereby saving them, and, consequently, the balance of the town. None of the consumed property was insured.

MR. J. ROSS BROWNE AND THE BRITISH MERCHANTS IN CHINA.

FREDERICK, Md., Sept. 4, 1869.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

It has afforded me great gratification to read in your paper of the 31st ult. the reply of James L. Kiernan, late United States Consul at Hong Kong, to the recent letter of Mr. J. Ross Browne in reply to the address of the British merchants in China. Unlike Mr. Kiernan, I was surprised at this address. In relation to the feelings and prejudices of the British merchants in China and their determination, by force or fraud, to continue to carry on their nefarious traffic in opium and coolies, and the perpetration of commercial frauds and outrages of every kind, as against the Chinese government and people, I fully agree with ex-Consul Kiernan; but I was surprised that they, whose policy has heretofore been hidden and secret, should so boldly proclaim their sentiments to a minister of the United States without the fear before them of having their communication thrown back with indignation.

No man of intelligence who has lived in China for any length of time, and sought to inform himself in relation to public and commercial affairs, but knows of the daily outrages perpetrated by the merchants upon the Chinese officials and the unoffending people. If he has stood upon the banks of the Yangtse, or the Min, or at Canton, Ningpo or Amoy, he must have asked what pursuit was followed by those heavily armed lorchas and house boats, the crew armed to the teeth, flying foreign flags or the colors of the various compradors (that is, Chinese managers of foreign warehouses), sailing swiftly towards the huge foreign warehouses on the water, in a land where all is peace, the people of which, unless contaminated by foreign influence or roused to anger, are as timid as sheep. If he has wandered from the cities into the open country he must again have wondered why men, women and children with the cry of "Wan kiang" (foreign devil) on their lips fled before him; and if he has paused long enough to see a wild crowd of Englishmen mounted on stump-tailed ponies followed by packs of huge dogs galloping recklessly through the well tilled rice plantations and vegetable gardens, devastating the work of months of patient industry, the thought must have occurred to him that it was not to be wondered the people desired as little intercourse as possible with these "outside barbarians."

When the Taeping rebellion was gathering strength and force against the government the rebels met the imperial troops armed with the most approved weapons of modern warfare, which had been transported from the ports to the rebel camp under the very eyes of the Chinese authorities, who again and again protested against the violation of treaty stipulations. Was this calculated to induce friendship for the nations of the West, whose gunboats and vessels of war lay in their waters, ready to belch forth shot and shell in defence of a drunken sailor or desperate captain if captured in the attempt to sell rifles at $500, powder at $100 the canister, and percussion caps at $25 the box, to the rebels up the river?

The action of the governmental authorities in China is the action of the people. Strange as it may appear to those who have believed the Chinese government to be a monarchical oligarchy, it is the most democratic on the face of the earth; for promotion to office and high position (below the Emperor) intellect being the only requisite. There stump oratory and "running the machine" has no weight; "the pen is mightier than the sword," the tongue or "the ring." Their officials are selected by a board of examination, and according to their capacity assigned to positions under the government, any one being eligible for examination who presents himself before the board; and the thesis—which shut up alone in a cell—he has prepared being always open to examination and criticism, precludes partiality, for it is said "to bear his merits on its face;" in fact, the whole government is a sort of civil West Point on a grander scale, without the partiality of appointment; the people are cadets.

All that Mr. Ross Browne could have seen of China or the Chinese must have been with English glasses from the windows of the British hongs, and all he has gathered of their habits and customs from the after-dinner table talk of the merchants and their retinue of clerks, tea-tasters, &c. If he had negotiated a treaty with the Chinese officials he would have no pretext to assert that intellectually they are inferior to himself or the race from which he sprung. On the contrary, as has been the case with every negotiator with them, he would discover each day longer that he lives, that their diplomacy at least is equal to that of the West. Does Mr. Browne suppose because they are a nation not Christian that they are a race of fools? Does he suppose that they are not aware that force against weakness must be met with guile? Mr. Browne says himself that it has been.

On the day that I assumed the duties of Consul of the United States I was told exultingly by an English gentleman that "there was my only protection in China," and he pointed to a British gunboat in the harbor. Then and there, on the part of my countrymen and myself, I distinctly disclaimed any such protection, and stated that I relied alone for protection upon the treaty my government had made with that of China. He laughed, saying I had "much to learn of China." A few days afterwards I had interviews with the Viceroy, the Prefect and the Haiquan, and expressed to them the same idea, adding my determination to adhere in my official business strictly to the spirit and letter of our treaty, asking, at the same time, if they would do the same. They expressed their gratification, and said that the foreign officials had always expected them to carry out every treaty clause strictly, with threats in case of their failure to do so, while, on the contrary, they themselves appeared to consider treaty stipulations on their side as a dead letter. I remained Consul at the port of Foo Chow for over three years, and although during that time many matters of importance and difficult negotiation transpired, requiring long correspondence with these officers, I always found them ready to conform to any provision of our treaty to which their attention was called, for the reason, as they said, that I had pledged myself to do so likewise. As a general rule the officials of the United States in China, I believe, have been guided by this rule of action, and from this in a great measure has grown our popularity as contradistinguished from the hatred toward the British; and that this preference for Americans does exist I assert, notwithstanding the assertions of Mr. Ross Browne to the contrary.

I believe that if it could be impressed upon the Chinese mind that force hereafter should not be used except in such case as where it would be the resort of the Western Powers in cases of disagreement among themselves, that treaty stipulations would be strictly carried out and their government and people would be treated with that respect those Powers claim for themselves, we should hear from foreign Ministers no more complaints of "this guile" which they say they have been compelled so often to meet with force and violence.

Mr. Kiernan says:—"The Chinese, summing up all their virtues and defects, are not a whit inferior to us as a people." I honor him for the sentiment, for it is true as against a mass of prejudice and falsehood. I have seen something of men and manners in this country and abroad, and some of the most intelligent, cultivated and courteous men I have met have been Chinese gentlemen. The most faithful, competent and industrious servants I have ever had were Chinese. I have a girl now in my family whose devotion to my children is only equalled by their affection to her.

In conclusion, I desire to say a word of the British officials in China, towards whom, on the part of the merchants, there is great antipathy. Generally men born in China of English parents or who have gone there at an early age, they are gentlemen of high intellectual cultivation and tone. They hold their positions for life and are entirely independent of trade. Your real John Bull in China, after an adverse decision before his consul, often wishes their consular system was like that of the United States. "Then," as he says, "by Jove, I'd write to London and have him removed, if money could do it, as these blarsted Yankees do, and get a friend appointed who would know on which side his bread was buttered."

SAML. L. GOUVERNEUR,
Ex-United States Consul at Foo Chow.

MURDER AT PIDGE'S GROUND, RHODE ISLAND.—A fracas occurred about half-past ten o'clock last night at Pidge's Ground, near Cedar Grove, which will probably result in the death of one of the participants. The name of the wounded party is Thomas Ward. He belongs in Pawtucket, but for some time past he has been keeping a little place on the grounds, assisted by his wife. The particulars, as nigh as we can learn them, are as follows:—A man named Charles L. Owens, of Danielsonville, Conn., together with another man, whose name is not known, were walking during the evening on the grounds, and wishing to smoke, Owens' companion volunteered to go to Ward's place for matches. He did so, while Owens remained a short distance away. Some conversation took place between the man and Mrs. Ward, when he became very abusive. Ward then came out of the place with a knife and axe, when both men set upon him. Mrs. Ward in great terror ran over to Cedar Grove for the officers, who started at once. Arriving on the spot they found Ward upon the ground badly wounded in the abdomen, his bowels protruding, while by him was standing Owens with the knife and hatchet in his hand. The other had escaped. Ward was raised and put to bed, and the officers procured a wagon and brought Owens to the Central station in this city, where he now remains. He is marked with several severe cuts, but none of them serious.—Providence Herald, Sept. 9.

THE WAR AMONG THE WOMAN'S RIGHTS WOMEN.

NEW YORK, Sept. 4, 1869.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

Will you permit me, through your columns, to correct a statement made in your yesterday's issue? The report of the proceedings at the meeting of the so-called Workingwoman's Association says:—"It touched the soul of Mrs. Norton, who made the amende honorable in brief terms."

There was nothing said by me that could, by any possibility, bear such a construction as that, save by wilful intention. The nearest approach to anything like an apology consisted in my saying that no person in the audience could regret more than I in feeling obliged to speak the harsh but stern truths which the conditions seemed to demand.

If any person could distort that into an "amende honorable" it must have been under the immediate influence of that "personal magnetism" and "powerful persuasion" of which Miss Anthony boasts.

And that, by the way, is one of my causes of complaint—the manipulation of reporters, by a species of "cheap John" bidding through deft flattery of attention before the meetings begin, and allusions to them through the course of "the talk" intended to tickle their vanity; and so apparent and oft-repeated as to have become—to sensible, plain folk who have'nt a paper to sell—a source of such disgust as to utterly destroy any pleasure or profit that might otherwise be gained at either the bureau or the association meetings. Any reform which cannot bear truthful and unbiased reports of its proceedings—which cannot bear investigation and exposure to the world at any time when circumstances or consistency demand either—which cannot be talked to all classes in all its breadth and bearings—whose merits are not strong enough to raise the people to its standard when its true purposes are avowed, is not worthy the name of reform or the efforts of honest workers, and "I'll none of it."

Any movement which is not all this is not reform, but a sham built upon the merits of its name for dishonest purposes—a cloak of grace to cover selfishness and enhance the interests only of those who are base enough to prostitute a good word to a bad use.

Finally, so far from making any apology, I, on the contrary, reserved my strongest points, for the reason that, having relinquished my intention some days before of saying anything, I had not my proofs with me to sustain my charges. With a poor memory and without notes I was compelled to talk guardedly, and consequently to a disadvantage; and none but an adept at turning severe censure of themselves into credit could have possibly so construed either my words or my manner as to make them bear the slightest semblance to an apology or amende honorable. For the benefit of those of your readers who are interested in this matter—especially working girls and women—I will add that I intend to war upon the association until it is purged of its ten cent speculators, or, failing in that, till it dies.

AMUSEMENTS.

NIBLO'S.—Mr. Boucicault's new drama, "Formosa, or the Railroad to Ruin," was played here last night, for the first time, to a full house, with unequivocal success. This was the verdict of the audience at large—the liberal mass that does the loud applause; a tribunal whose dramatic perceptions are in an American audience quite as accurate, and whose taste and judgment as correct as these things are apt to be with the critical few. The play is constructed with perfect art, written with practised ease and in complete familiarity with all the moods of the play-going public, and is rich enough in picturesque characterization to remind one of Dickens. The background of the piece is that seasonable excitement, the Oxford and Cambridge boat race—as that of a former piece by this author was the Derby. On this is traced the story of "Formosa," the temptress against her will in a sharper's game against the hero of the piece. Her character in the play is heightened by the fact that she does not act from the ordinary motives of the tempters in these cases. She is in love with the man she tempts to his ruin, and lures him, always herself in a supposed agony. She does this to save her parents the pang they would feel at knowing her true character; for if she balks the game of the villains in whose hands she is they threaten that disclosure. Here the dramatist has put himself against the declaration of dramatists and poets the wide world over, who have all held that love, the master passion, is never second to filial duty. Except in this lapse the dramatic situation here is quite analogous to that in the opening part of the "Lady of Lyons." Formosa is used by villains to ruin Burroughs, just as Melnotte is used to ensnare Pauline, and the penalty of failure—that of disclosing the true character—is the same in both plays. The first scene in "Formosa" represents the Old Swan Boat House on the banks of the Thames, near Oxford, where the crew of the "dark blue" are being coached by Sam Baker, a retired prize fighter, who is now the host of the Swan. Sam and Mrs. Boker have a daughter Jenny, from whom, in the belief that she has been living a reputable life in town, they have received presents from time to time as the fruits of her industry. It soon transpires, however, that Jenny is the celebrated courtezan whose names have been variously Lady Arthur Pierrepont and "Formosa," and her recognition by a polished scamp, named Compton Kerr, and by his companion, Major Jorum, places the repentant barmaid, anxious to redeem the errors of her early life, in a very painful position. With the knowledge they possess they can influence Jenny Boker to resume her old station, and, influenced partly by jealousy, she consents to become their accomplice in luring to destruction Tom Burroughs, a young man of large means and good family, who is an Oxford graduate and the "stroke" in the impending University boat race. A young girl, named Nelly, in love with Tom, has been brought up by old Doctor Doremus, a fellow of St. John's College, as his daughter, but she is claimed by a released convict, named Bob Sanders, who proves by a written document in his possession that she is his daughter, and thus a love affair between her and Tom is temporarily broken off. In the second act the gang of sharpers, with Formosa to assist them, are seen hastening the ruin of Tom, who now occupies chambers in the Albany, is fleeced at cards by the Major and the tribe of "rooks" in his employ, and is enthralled by the blandishments of the courtezan, who occupies a magnificent villa at Fulham. The scene of the residence of Formosa is represented with a bright moon, a well laid-out garden, and an illuminated interior, so admirably arranged that an immediate call for Mr. William Beverley as the artist had to be responded to before the action could proceed. In the third act Formosa shows some reluctance to further the designs of the conspirators, and a powerful situation occurs when she throws off the associations of a "gay" life and implores her parents to permit her return to the paths of virtue. The fourth act represents the storming of the sponging house, where Tom Burroughs has been incarcerated for the debts he has contracted through the roguery of his infamous plunderers at play, and his rescue time enough to permit his taking his place in the match. The Oxford crew come in victorious; Tom Burroughs marries Nelly, whose father shows signs of atonement for his past misdeeds, and the villains Compton Kerr and Major Jorum are handed over to the police to answer, at Bow street, for the forgeries they have perpetrated.

It is nonsense to talk of the sensational drama in view of this piece. Its effects are legitimately due to art. It is the legitimate drama of this day as much as the "School for Scandal" was the legitimate drama of the day in which it was written. It is a picture that people will find more or less accurate according to their taste, but drawn always with the definite dramatic purpose of giving the "very age and body of the time its form and pressure." We may doubt the intention of the author in the introduction of certain of his elements. He says that he has brought in the demi-monde to scourge vice, but the scourging does not appear. Vice is not scored very severely when our sympathies are excited for it by seeing it in situations aptly contrived to make it look as much as may be like a good article of virtue. We think the error of all the playwrights who have put the queens of the demi-monde on the stage is the same. These women are presented as having a delicacy of thought utterly inconsistent with the lives they lead. Women who could lead the lives that these fictitious creatures lead in one phase could not think the thoughts given them in another phase. Thus our sympathies are excited by a falsity.

But they are excited nevertheless, as was abundantly shown last night in the case of "Formosa." The piece was admirably presented in point of scenery and had also unusually good fortune in its actors. Miss Kate Newton was always effective as Formosa, and Mr. Thorne did full justice to the fine part of Tom Burroughs. Messrs. Holston, Morton and Pearson were especially noteworthy in their several parts.

FIFTH AVENUE THEATRE.—Yesterday evening this pretty, but ill-ventilated little theatre was filled with spectators of the first representation of "Dreams," the five-act "romantic comedy" which Mr. Robertson and Mr. Boucicault have built on the basis of Tennyson's poem, "Lady Clara Vere de Vere." The fourth act, which abounds in good dramatic points, was written, it is said, entirely by Mr. Boucicault. New York audiences have learned to judge themselves of the merits of an English play, independently of its failure or success on the other side of the Atlantic. Notwithstanding, therefore, the failure of this weakest of Mr. Robertson's pieces, which was originally produced under another title at Liverpool, and its comparatively moderate success when modified and renamed at London, it may have here at least as long a run as "Play" has had. Perhaps the very decided hit which was made by Mr. Lewis as Mr. John Hibbs, and the sweet, expressive face of Miss Agnes Ethel, who acted admirably the part of Lina.

A simple maiden in her flower,
Worth a hundred coats of arms,

may, together with the really superb scenery of the piece, secure it a much longer run. Mrs. G. H. Gilbert personated well the character of Frau Harfthal. Mrs. Clara Jennings, as Lady Clara Vere de Vere, occasionally escaped from her usual staginess. Mr. E. L. Davenport had but a slender opportunity, as the Ritmeister Van Harfthal, to "come out strong," and did not avail himself of it. Mr. George Clark, as Rudolf, showed a marked improvement in his style of acting. Mr. George Holland, as Old Gray (ninety and nimble), and Mr. W. Davidge, as the Duke of Loamshire (noble and ninety), were capital nonogenarians. But the honors of the evening were won by Mr. Lewis—whom we overheard an old and experienced playgoer compare favorably with Charles Matthews—and by Miss Agnes Ethel. Mr. Stoepel and his orchestra gave some new and original music; but in so small a hall and in such sweltering weather there was almost too much of it. We have rarely seen "a first representation" on the New York stage go off more smoothly and satisfactorily than that of "Dreams."

OLYMPIC THEATRE.—The sensation drama of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was produced at this theatre last night. The number of people present to witness the representation was not remarkably large. The fact of the matter is that plays of the Uncle Tom complexion are altogether out of date at the present time. A sickly, stupid sentimentality pervades them all. When this drama was first produced at the old National theatre it enjoyed a most successful run, but times are changed since then, and Uncle Tom's psalm singing proclivities, Topsy's pert wickedness, or George Harris' declamation about freedom and liberty now fall flat upon the audience. If we are to have plays descriptive of life in the South during the existence of slavery, let them be written in a more truthful manner than those which give us the dark side of the picture. The drama last night was well put upon the stage, the acting was good and the scenery excellent. One scene particularly, Legree's plantation on the Red river, was very fine. Mrs. G. Howard as Topsy sustained the reputation which she has already secured by her representation of this character. Eva, by Miss Alice Cushman, was neatly and truthfully played. For a child so young Miss Cushman is remarkable. Miss Vernon as Eliza, Mrs. Hind as Aunt Ophelia, and Messrs. Fox, Cushman, Mortimer, Studley and Becks each played their respective characters well.

WALLACK'S THEATRE—SOLON SHINGLE AND THE LIVE INDIAN.—The manager of this theatre has furnished to the public at the close of the summer season a most enjoyable entertainment in the two plays of "Solon Shingle" and the "Live Indian," and judging from the well filled house and roars of laughter, they were highly appreciated. Of course Mr. John E. Owens was the great attraction, and, as the play bills properly expressed it, the characters he sustained, of Solon Shingle and in the "Live Indian" were his "world renowned specialties." "That barrel of apple sass," in the inimitable acting and language of Mr. Owens, has been quoted as proverbial humor by the people everywhere. The whole performance of the character of Solon Shingle is so natural, so quaint and full of fun that the audience was kept in delight all through. The extravaganza of the "Live Indian" is a roaring piece, and Owens, as Tom Jones, Miss Coralie Crinoline, a mantuamaker, and Kur-ne-no-we-an makes one's sides ache with laughter. Mr. Tom Owens, as the Irish servant, Dennis O'Brien, was excellent, and Miss Florence Stanley, as Julia Wharton, performed her part well. In fact, Mr. Owens was very well supported by the company throughout both pieces. Such light and laughter provoking plays never fail to be successful, and the manager of Wallack's shows that he understands the public taste.

THEATRE COMIQUE.—A new play of H. J. Byron, in three acts and a prologue, was produced at this house last night. It is called "Blow for Blow," and is based upon the vulgar passion of revenge excited in a wretched character which has nothing else to recommend it. The story is carried out by the resemblance of a living sister to a dead one, and the former is made to play a very contemptible part to gratify the vengeance of a low ruffian. The ruffian is John Drummond, whom Mr. Boniface admirably represents. The sister is Alice Petherick, very prettily impersonated by Miss Lillie Eldridge. Drummond had loved the dear sister who married Sir Harry Linden, and to be revenged upon him he persuades Mrs. Petherick to enter into his scheme of vengeance by describing the ill-treatment which her twin sister, whom she dearly loved, had suffered at the hands of Linden. The resemblance being complete between the two sisters, she consents to play a part in Drummond's plot, which is to induce Linden to believe that his wife is still living, although he has already taken a second love to his bosom. The working out of this plot is a little clumsy, but, of course, sensational and tableauish. There is some fun in it, and a good deal of laughable nonsense, which warmed up the third tier to a pitch of enthusiasm, although it tried to keep itself cool in its shirt sleeves. The fun was done by Mr. Harry Hotto and Miss Lizzie Willmore. So was the nonsense, but they told well with the elevated portion of the audience.

THE BOWERY THEATRE reopened for the season last evening under most promising auspices. The house was filled in every part, and from the applause with which the piece selected for the occasion was greeted there is no doubt but it will have a long and prosperous run. The "grand spectacular drama" of The Scottish Chiefs and the Gathering of the Clans was the piece put on the bills for the grand opening. The announcement that it would be produced with éclat, with new scenery, machinery and appointments—original music, brilliant effects, splendid tableaus and battle scenes—with a superb cast, was as faithfully verified as all such theatrical announcements generally are. The groundwork of the play is somewhat historical, the scenes and incidents being principally taken from Miss Porter's novel of "The Scottish Chiefs." Of course the principal character represented was that of Sir William Wallace, who in his day so long, and for a time successfully, battled for his country's freedom against the English Edward. Miss Porter's graphic account of the incidents of the great struggle is faithfully followed out in the dramatization of the piece, and thus a wide field was presented for some thrilling spectacular scenes, and in the frequent encounters between the followers of Wallace and the Saxon soldiery. The management has made the most of these favorable circumstances, and the patrons of the Bowery were treated to frequent telling mechanical effects in the principal scenes, and to some tall fighting, massacres, conflagrations and "hairbreadth escapes" of the patriot Wallace and his devoted followers by flood and field. The principal characters acquitted themselves nobly, while all the subordinates proved themselves well up in their several parts; and for an opening night and a first representation by the present company at the Bowery, the piece was a great success.

Musical and Theatrical Notes.

Offenbach recently celebrated his silver wedding.

Prentice terms the Chapman Sisters the "violets of the stage."

Mme. Marie Sass does not come to this country after all. She is under engagement to sing in Paris for the next four years.

"Judith," the new opera by Franz Doppler (libretto by Dr. Mosenthal), will shortly be produced at Berlin and Munich.

The following notice is placarded in the new Vienna opera house:—"It is forbidden to throw flowers and fruits upon the stage."

Miss Charlotte Cushman, who is at present in England, meditates, it is said, another tour with her famous version of "Meg Merrilies."

Mlle. Zeiss is engaged for the French opera in New Orleans, which opens in October, to play in "La Prophète," "La Favorita," "Il Trovatore," &c., as the leading contralto.

Zoe, the "Cuban sylph" and muscular exponent of the French Spy, will commence her fall dramatic tour at Newark on the 13th inst. in the sensational drama of the "Broken Sword."

Miss Rose Hersee, Mrs. Zelda Harrison Seguin and Messrs. Castle, Nordblom, Campbell, Lawrence and Hall are the leading members of the Parepa-Rosa troupe. Mme. Rosa will alternate the leading soprano rôles with Miss Hersee.

The Great European Circus having perambulated through the States all summer is again in the vicinity of New York. Its tent will be pitched in Newark on next Wednesday and Thursday, and on the following Monday the "show" will open in Brooklyn.

Professor Hermann, the "prestidigitateur," who, it will be remembered, took his leave of our citizens some four and a half years ago, has just returned from Europe, and will open at the Academy of Music on next Monday evening, with a highly novel and attractive programme. With the view of giving the public something fresh and at the same time enjoyable, in the way of deceptive feats and tricks of sleight-of-hand, the great "illusionist" has prepared such a startling repertoire of things "which seem to be and yet are not," that there is scarcely a doubt that he will once more create quite a furor. The entertainment will be entirely new from beginning to end, not even the smallest one of the tricks ever before having been attempted or even thought of in this country, or as for that matter in any other, either. Surely this will be the very opportunity for which so many of our blasé "know-alls" and parvenue "know-nothings" have been so ardently sighing for so long a time—the opportunity at least to see something really new. Our citizens love to be humbugged, if the thing be only done in a neat and clever manner; and as Professor Hermann is exceedingly neat and clever in everything pertaining to professional deception that he undertakes, and as he is acknowledged, furthermore, to be the greatest trickster of the age, in his own peculiar line of tricky business, there is every probability of his meeting with deserved success. Professor Hermann will be assisted in his present series of prestidigitatorial entertainments by his younger brother, Alexander, who is himself an adept in the "black art."

SUBURBAN INTELLIGENCE.

NEW JERSEY.

Communipaw.

THE ABBATOIR INJUNCTION ANSWERED.—Mr. Winfield, counsel for the stock yard company, filed an answer yesterday to the charge upon which the Chancellor's injunction was issued. There is a general denial of charges. No offensive odors were at any time emitted from the abattoir. At the suggestion of scientific men a chemical process is employed which effectually deodorizes all mephitic or infectious vapors which may arise. The smell complained of arises from the garbage used by the Central Railroad Company in filling in. Large quantities of decaying vegetable matter are washed along the shore and left there to decompose, so that the stench at times becomes almost intolerable. On very damp days the live hogs create a disagreeable smell, but not sufficient to affect the health of anybody. This is the sum of the reply which is supported by a large batch of affidavits from scientific men. The hearing of the argument is set down for to-morrow, before the Chancellor at Jersey City.

Hoboken.

A RAILROAD HORROR AVERTED.—Yesterday afternoon, as the five o'clock train was leaving the Morris and Essex depot, the forewheels of the tender gave way and soon brought the cars to a stand by the shock. The locomotive proceeded for some distance, its occupants not knowing what had occurred. All the evening trains were blocked up outside the depot, but no person was injured.

MORE OPPOSITION TO FISK, JR.—The property owners in the western region of Hoboken have petitioned the Common Council against the passage of the new branch of the Erie road from the Bergen tunnel to Weehawken through Seventeenth street. The City Fathers met last night in Committee of the Whole to consider the application. The line of railroad connects the great depot at Weehawken with the Erie road, and is not likely to be broken for the present.

Hudson City.

DESPERATE AFFRAY.—On Sunday night Mr. G. C. Bayne, while sitting in front of his residence, on South street, heard the cry of a boy for help in the yard. He hastened, with a man named McCarthy, to the spot, where he saw a strange man in a very excited condition holding a boy by the arm. Bayne interfered, and the stranger turned away, but soon returned, wielding a knife and crying out to Bayne that he would kill him. McCarthy threw out his arm and pushed back Bayne so as to shield the latter from the attack, but as he did so the knife descended, and striking him on the bridge of the nose penetrating to the palate of the mouth. McCarthy was taken off and received medical attendance, while the perpetrator was pursued and captured. He gave his name as Adam Reid. A wound was found upon his thigh, which he says was inflicted by McCarthy, but this story is not credited. Reid was taken before Recorder Aldridge yesterday morning and committed for trial.

Newark.

ANOTHER PETRIE CASE.—Emil Mortel, who was arrested on charges of having sold considerable quantities of "cleansed" cancelled revenue stamps, has been bailed in the sum of $4,000. This case presents many features similar to that of Dr. Petrie, of Elizabeth. Mortal like, the doctor occupied a good position in society, and is very respectably connected. He resides at Irvington, and is said to occupy a responsible position in the New York Custom House.

BLOODY AFFRAY AT A CAMP MEETING.

A Negro Shot Dead and a White Man Wounded.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 6, 1869.

During the progress of a colored camp meeting, which was being held on Sunday evening at Morrisville, Pa., adjacent to this city, a resident of Trenton, named Samuel Gaston, about twenty-five years old, became involved in a quarrel with a negro in consequence of some insult alleged to have been offered to a female friend by Gaston. It is stated that the colored man named Charley Brown, a resident of Tyburn, Pa., attacked him for the alleged insult offered to the woman, and in self-defence Gaston discharged a revolver at him three times, one of the shots proving fatal. In the course of the melée a white man named Wm. Sheppard was wounded in the leg by a wandering shot from Gaston's revolver.

Gaston, to escape the revengeful fury of the mob, immediately after the bloody occurrence decamped through the woods and concealed himself till about eight o'clock on Sunday evening, when he appeared before the Mayor of Trenton and surrendered himself. Refusing to be locked up and offering bail in the absence of any direct proof of the man's guilt and for want of jurisdiction Mayor Napton refused to take any cognizance of the affair, so Gaston remained at large till yesterday, when he repaired to Doylestown, Pa., and consigned himself to the custody of the authorities. Yesterday afternoon an inquest was commenced on the body of Brown, but it had not concluded at a late hour, and the evidence adduced was corroborative of the foregoing facts.

LONG ISLAND.

PROBABLE MURDER AT LITTLE NECK.—On Saturday night last a very serious and probably fatal affray occurred at the house of Henry Miller, at Little Neck, between Miller and a man named John Minsher, in which Miller was so badly stabbed that he is not expected to recover, and a third party named Powell Myer was also dangerously wounded. There was a raffle at the house of Miller, at which quite a number were present, when a dispute arose between the above parties, and Minsher drew a large knife and stabbed Miller in the breast. Myer went to his assistance, when he, too, was stabbed in the breast. The crowd then pressed upon Minsher, and overpowering him, made him secure until the arrival of officer Roe, who took him to the Flushing Jail. Yesterday morning he was arraigned before Justice Quarterman, who committed him to await the result of the men's injuries, both of whom are confined to their beds, under the medical treatment of Dr. Hoag.

STATEN ISLAND.

THE WILKIN DROWNING CASUALTY.—Coroner Jaffrey held an inquest on the body of George A. Wilkin, the young man who was drowned on New Dorp beach, and from the evidence it appears that deceased had left Brooklyn on Sunday morning with a party of six, consisting of Wm. Merrill, Harry Hill, R. C. Wheelwright, W. and D. Putnam and —— Hicks, in the sloop yacht Bluewing, debarked at the Club House for dinner. At four o'clock they started to return to the yacht, which was anchored about one hundred yards from the shore, and one boat load had been put aboard. On the second trip the boat was upset about midway by the heavy sea which was running. Putnam and Wheelwright clung to the boat, which finally drifted them in. Merrill reached the shore in a very exhausted condition; but Wilkin, who had started to swim with him, gave out when about ten yards from it, and sank to rise no more. His body was under water over half an hour. There were fifteen or twenty persons on the beach at the time, but no effort was made to save him. A verdict of "accidental drowning" was rendered.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY.

ANNUAL COUNTY FAIR.—The Twenty-fifth annual fair of the Agricultural and Horticultural Society commenced on the grounds near White Plains yesterday. Few visitors were present, as the day is always devoted to the reception and entering of articles offered for competition. An immense "floral hall," composed of canvass, has been erected for the arrangement of horticultural productions, as also a capacious stand overlooking the race course and capable of accommodating nearly one thousand persons. Equine sports are set apart for the last days of the fair, when prizes to the amount of $1,000 will be contested for. Governor Hoffman has been invited to be present by the Board of Managers, and is expected to visit the grounds on Thursday. Should the weather continue fine there is every reson to believe that the fair this year will will demonstrate an unprecedented success.

FIRE AT YONKERS—DESTRUCTION OF A BREWERY.—At half-past one o'clock yesterday morning the large brewery of Osterheld & Brothers, on Manhattan avenue, Yonkers, was discovered to be on fire, and although the fire department of the village was soon on the spot, the rapidity of the flames was such as to defy their laborious efforts. Notwithstanding their limited facilities the department succeeded in getting three or four streams of water on the burning structure; but the fire had gained unconquerable control, and in a few hours the building became a total loss. The loss sustained by Messrs. Osterheld & Brothers on machinery is $2,000; insured in the Star Insurance Company for $2,000, and in the Manhattan Insurance Company for $1,500. A valuation of $3,000 was placed on the stock, on which the amount of insurance has not transpired. The building was owned by Thomas Ludlow, and its destruction involves a loss of $1,500. The insurance, if any, was not ascertained. It is the general belief that the building was wilfully fired.

THE ELECTION IN WILMINGTON, DEL.

An election takes place in Wilmington, Del., today. By an act of the last Legislature the old city officers are removed, and the election is for an entire new list, including Mayor, City Treasurer, Assessor, and a full city council, consisting of nineteen members. The law referred to is expected to make the contest very close, as it is supposed to favor the democratic party, who last year were beaten by about 300. The republican candidate for Mayor—J. S. Valentine—is the present incumbent and has been elected to that position three times.

CITY POLITICS.

THE SEVENTH WARD TWEED ASSOCIATION.

A Good Deal of Talk and No Action.

There was a very well attended meeting of this association last evening at No. 68 East Broadway. After the meeting was organized and Mr. Waters installed as chairman, a gentleman named Dowley endeavored to enlighten the unsophisticated. After berating everybody who have the habit of berating the democracy and declaring it to be the party of purity and anti-corruption, he stated that the real object of the meeting was to devise measures by which the party would be more firmly united in the future, and made all the stronger by the union of all factions against the combinations that were at work to break it to pieces. He said that the movement made by the Seventh Ward Association was a Tammany movement, and that it advocated the principles that Tammany Hall advocated, and was in favor of all democrats who would deal justly by their fellow men and opposed to all who were corrupt, and concluded by saying that the pure, undefiled, never to be frightened democracy were not to blame if public buildings cost more than they ought or that corruption had reached high places, but that the blame should be laid on radicalism and the radicals, who enjoy sinecures and live on the fat of the land without working for the aforesaid fat.

At the close of Mr. Dowley's remarks, which were loudly applauded, a delegate from the Thomas Coman Association of the Tenth ward said that if there was to be a mass meeting to declare that Belmont should "go" the association would turn out 200 strong.

Several other delegates spoke at length on the subject of Belmont being distasteful to the democracy, and contended that William M. Tweed was the choice of the party for the "vacant chair" that would soon be. Belmont, one delegate remarked, was a bondholder and a paid agent of the Rothschilds, and as a consequence paid more attention to hoarding gold than to furthering the interests of the party.

After a great deal of speech making and motions and countermotions that got the meeting completely by the ears it was moved that a committee, consisting of the president and three delegates from each club represented in the room, should be appointed, the committee to give the time for a grand anti-Belmont demonstration at the Cooper Institute.

The president of each club represented at once appointed his delegates, but it was discovered that the M. T. Brennan Association had five men on their committee.

A delegate from the "red hot" democracy of the same ward objected to the "unequal representation." He wanted every club to have a fair show.

The President of the M. T. Brennan Association suggested that trifles shouldn't be quarrelled over, that all the delegates of the association were good democrats, and so the more the merrier.

The "red hot" delegate informed the President of the M. T. B.'s that he couldn't see things in that light.

Several delegates hereupon jumped to their feet and began talking all at the same time and gesticulating wildly, the words "unequal representation" sounding loudly above the din.

A rumpus was imminent, so one of the M. T. B.'s said he was willing that his association should not be represented any more than any other. This was oil to the troubled waters. The motion appointing the committee was reconsidered, and one requesting five delegates from each democratic club opposed to Belmont to come to a meeting, which would be called by the chair, at which meeting arrangements would be made for the mass meeting, was passed, when the meeting adjourned.

Eighteenth Ward German Democrats.

A special meeting of this organization was held last evening at their headquarters, 253 avenue A. Mr. Jacob Seitz, the president of the association, occupied the chair. The meeting was very largely attended, and the proceedings throughout were of the most harmonious character. The report of the Executive Committee was presented and adopted. The report recommended that the association should take part in the approaching Humboldt festival, and it was agreed that the members of the association should be invited to join the public procession on that occasion.

After the usual routine business had been transacted the meeting proceeded to the election of delegates to the German Democratic General Committee. The following gentlemen were elected by acclamation:—Captain George Hubschmann, and Messrs. Butenschoen, Gerken and Wiesman.

The subject of the approaching elections was discussed, and it was resolved to hold a mass meeting on the 20th inst. to take into consideration the candidates for the posts of Assistant Alderman and a School Trustee for the ward. The mass meeting will be held at headquarters, and is expected to be a large affair and to result in the decision of the German democrats of the ward to vote the straight Tammany ticket at the approaching election. The registers and canvassers for the district were appointed and the meeting then terminated.

THE PACIFIC COAST.

Wreck of a British Bark Off the California Coast.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 6, 1869.

The British iron bark Harleck Castle, bound hence July 15 for Iquiqui, Peru, with a cargo of 15,000 sacks of barley, went ashore August 31, of Piedras Blancos, about 300 miles south of this port. The vessel and corgo were a total loss. The crew were saved. The ship had experienced a hurricane August 1, which crippled her, and she was returning to this port for repairs.

The Defeated Candidates in San Francisco Demanding a Recount of Votes—The Pacific Railroad Completed Through to the Harbor of San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 6, 1869.

At a meeting of the Board of Supervisors Mayor McCoppin and the other defeated democratic candidates demanded a recount of the entire vote of the city and county of San Francisco, and brought charges of fraud against the commission appointed to count the vote.

The Western Pacific Railroad has been completed to the Bay of San Francisco. The first through passengers from New York arrived to-day via Almeda.

THE INDIANS.

Council at Medicine Bluff—The Comanches and Kiowas Professing Peace—The Cheyennes to Come in.

FORT HARKER, Sept. 6, 1869.

Messrs. Felix P. Birnot, William E. Dodge and Nathan Bishop, United States Special Indian Commissioners, reached Fort Harker Saturday evening, having left Medicine Bluff on the 23d of August. They had a council on the 21st ult., at which all the principal chiefs of the Comanche, Kiowa, Witchilaw and affiliated tribes were present. Santanta, Sohabit, Milky Way, Archiaytadus, Buffalo, Good Moorva, Snaking Hand and others made speeches and said they would now walk in the white man's road, and they want the Washington Father to send good men to show them the road. All the Comanches now in will probably remain on the reservation. The Commissioners do not place much reliance on the promise of Snatanta and the Kiowas, but think the issue of better rations will keep them quiet.

The Commissioners held a council with the Cheyennes and Arapahoes, which resulted in an agreement with Medicine Arrow, chief of the Cheyennes, that he would immediately bring all the Northern Cheyennes to the camp on the North Fork of the Canadian river, if the Commissioners would promise them protection on their way down, which protection was promised. Full reports of the council will go to General Parker by mail.

SCHR JOHN CALLAGHAN, before reported wrecked in the late gale on the coast of Texas, was passed on the 20th ult, about 18 miles ENE of Aransas Light. She was bottom up, one of her masts, her bowsprit and one of her booms were alongside, with some of her sails made fast to them. The water casks and some of her deck load were picked up on the beach on the 18th. Nothing has been heard of the captain and crew. The vessel was valued at $8,500.

MISSING VESSEL—Ship Java (of Boston) Bassett, sailed from New York Jan 16 for Yokohama, with a cargo of coal, and though several vessels which sailed after her have arrived, nothing has been heard from her. Hopes are entertained, however, that she may have put into some of the out of the way ports in the Indian Ocean to trim cargo or to replace any spars that she may have lost. She was valued at $160,000, exclusive of her freight, when she left New York.
